Green Scores 'Insurgent' Labor Chiefs In Steel Row

He Implies A. F. L. Will Refuse Both Moral, Monetary Aid.

Lewis Hits Back In Heated Attack

Ouster of Mine Leader and 11 Other 'Rebels' Is Predicted.

A united front for labor in the fight to unionize the 500,000 steel workers of the country appeared impossible last night, as William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, sharply criticized the Committee for Industrial Organization and implied that the A. F. of L. would withhold moral and financial support from the drive.

Not mentioning by name John L. Lewis, chief of the C. I. O., Green denounced the insurgents who "deserted the American Federation" for their unwillingness to try to organize the steel workers through the federation's system.

He said:

"The sum total achieved by the Committee for Industrial Organization thus far is nothing whatever except division, discord and confusion within the ranks of organized labor."

Ouster Move Rumored.

Green's statement, quietly but threateningly worded, promised that the A. F. of L.'s governing body—the executive council—would go over the record of the C. I. O. today in the semiannual meeting here. Observers read into this statement the implication that very possibly the council would move to take immediate action toward ousting Lewis and the 11 other rebel chieftains.

The council now stands, unofficial polls show, about 10 to 5 for ousting Lewis and his colleagues, who, according to Green's statement, "made a very serious, if not fatal mistake when they flouted the decision of the last convention of the American Federation of Labor at Atlantic City last October."

In Pittsburgh, Philip Murray, chairman of the C. I. O., drive to unionize steel, last night said any action the executive council takes in Washington today "will have no effect" on the drive to organize the steel workers, according to the Associated Press.

He revealed that 72 paid organizers and 2,200 volunteers were at work in the steel areas from Cleveland to New England.

Lewis, obtaining a copy of Green's statement last night, although it was not for release until this morning, immediately countered with a heated reply which said "the executive council of the American Federation of Labor never had a plan to organize the steel industry."

Lack of Action Charged.

Green's statement had held that the actions of the C. I. O. "thwarted" the plans of the federation to organize the steel workers through its own channels into craft unions. Lewis, a belligerent opponent of the craft union theory, which has brought the Amrican Federation of Labor a membership of only 3,000,000 heads the drive to organize all workers in each big industry into one big union, thus hoping to round up the 30,000,000 unorganized workers of the country.

Lewis' counterstatement, listing the occasions when the executive council of the American Federation of Labor had promised to organize steel workers, said:

"The instructions were never executed; the executive council contented itself with heavy thinking on the subject, while in the meantime not a single organizer was sent into the steel industry.

"At the present time there is nothing to stop the American Federation of Labor from joining wholeheartedly with the committee for industrial organization in the fight to establish the right to organize and the right of collective bargaining in the steel and other major industries.

"However, if the executive council, in its deliberations and its judgment, elects to join with the corporations now composing the American Iron and Steel Institute in

CAPT. BORGE ROHDE.

Mrs. Owen and Danish Officer To Be Married on Long Island

U. S. Minister to Denmark Will Become Bride Today or Tomorrow of Member of King Christian's Bodyguard.

Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, the United States Minister to Denmark, soon will become the bride of Capt. Borge Rohde, of King Christian's bodyguard, it was announced in Copenhagen yesterday.

Rivaling anything of the sort that might have occurred in mythical Graustark, the romance of the handsome daughter of William Jennings Bryan and the towering, flaxen-haired soldier, is but six months old.

The first woman Minister in the history of the United States and Capt. Rohde met only last January in the Danish Court, where he bears the title of "Kammerjunker," or honorary gentleman groom to the King.

From the Danish capital came word that the wedding would take place either today or tomorrow at the Long Island estate of Mrs. Owen's daughter, Mrs. Robert Lehman.

Sunday Mrs. Owen reached the United States on a two-months leave of absence.

Capt. Rohde was en route to the United States last night. He is expected to arrive in New York today. He is 42 years old, and Mrs. Owen, for whom this will be the third marriage, is 50.

Gore Trailing In Oklahoma Senate Race

New Deal Critic Fourth in Early Returns as Rep. Lee Leads.

Old-Age Pensions Plan, Conservation Program Are Lagging.

By the United Press.

Oklahoma City, July 7.—Blind Senator Thomas P. Gore, occasional New Deal critic, was running fourth on early returns tonight in the eight-man race for the Democratic nomination for Gore's United States Senate seat.

Returns from 1,398 precincts out of the 3,411 in the State showed Representative Josh Lee well in front, with Gomer Smith, leader in the national Townsend movement, and Gov. E. W. Marland close for second. The two high men will enter a run-off primary.

The vote stood:
Lee, 67,255.
Smith, 42,783.
Marland, 43,407.
Gore, 33,139.

Pension Move Trails.

Meanwhile, the old-age pension amendment which was initiated by Gov. Marland and the proposal for a 1 per cent sales tax to finance it were winning, while that for an appropriation of $500,000 for conservation was behind.

Returns from 350 precincts:
Pensions—For, 23,543; against, 18,157.
Appropriation—For 14,304; against, 21,077.

Returns from 44 precincts showed:
Sam Houston, 33.
Miss Maude Thomas, 236.
Frank Bailey, 134.
William Cullen Bryant, 126.

The first count in the senatorial race was a surprise to political observers, who had expected Gore and Gov. Marland to make the strongest races.

Particular interest was shown in the upset race being made, apparently, by Gomer Smith, national vice president of the Townsend old age pension organization. He had turned "thumbs down" on any third party movement, despite the apparent favor with which other Townsendites have viewed the new Union Party organized by Representative William Lemke. Smith was running strong in rural precincts.

Representative Lee, who was leading the field, provided the biggest surprise, however. He is a former public speaking professor at the University of Oklahoma and is serving his first term in Congress.

New Deal Supporters.

Both Lee and Gov. Marland have been strong supporters of the Administration, and during the campaign they attacked Gore for his frequent criticism of the New Deal and his failure at times to vote for Administration measures.

On the Republican ticket, Herbert K. Hyde, former United States district attorney who prosecuted the Charles F. Urschel kidnapers, had an early lead for the senatorial nomination. From 71 precincts he was given 662 votes to 456 for Horace McKeever, Enid attorney, and 220 for Robert W. Kellough, Tulsa attorney.

Landon Asks State to Pass Pension Law

Kansas Special Session Considers Proposal on Social Security.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans. July 7.—Gov. Alf M. Landon today urged upon fellow Kansans a State constitutional amendment to permit "proper" participation in the "public obligation" of social security.

The Republican Presidential nominee opened a special session of the State Legislature by recommending submission and ratification of constitutional changes designed to clear the way for full participtaion in the Federal security law, but in doing so, Landon stressed that the New Deal program and the Republican platform upon which he seeks the Presidency provided "different" plans for social security.

"Any proposed amendment to the constitution," said Landon's address, "should merely grant to the Legislature of the State the power to enact laws to enable this State to join in any such final act for this purpose as may ultimately become the settled law upon this question."

Landon Trend Seen.

Later in the day, after conferences in which national party leaders said they reported evidences of a growing Landon trend, the Governor issued a brief formal statement on social security.

"Social security in the end," Landon said, "can only be built upon character and religion and industry, but in the meantime our natural humanity and the employment program of a great industrial civilization require the community through its government to protect those who by reason of age or other misfortune may have claims upon us.

"Flood and disaster lead us to build dikes and to take other means to protect us from a recurrence of the calamities we have known. We have passed through such a period. We know its effects upon individuals and the country as a whole. The thought behind social security is to create such a dike and other means as will protect us from a repetition of the troubles of the past years or minimize their effects."

Landon earlier received five representatives of the Kansas Allied Workers who complained in a petition of "miserable" relief conditions and sought permission to address the Legislature.

The petitioning group was told by the Governor that the question of an address was for the Senate and House to decide. Legislative leaders later referred their plea to the judiciary committees.

Stresses Security Plank.

"In considering proposed amendments," Landon told the legislators, "I desire to call attention to the fact that the platform of the Republican Party adopted at its national convention provides a plan of social security different from the social security act adopted by Congress. I don't deem this a fitting time to enter into a discussion of the relative merits. * * *

The House, overriding protests of the Democratic minority, adopted 64 to 47 a resolution to restrict the session's business to the proposed social security amendments, now in virtual final form for consideration. Senate action on this resolution was delayed a day through a technical objection raised by Senator Joe McDonald, Democrat.

But also by means of a parliamentary move, the Senate blocked introduction of bills by McDonald, providing for immediate compliance with the Federal social security program. He contended an amendment was unnecessary.

National Republican figures who conferred with Landon and who were present to hear him speak included Senator Barbour, of New Jersey, who predicted Landon would carry the State "by a quarter million;" Representative Joseph W. Martin, of Massachusetts, Eastern manager, who said, "we'll carry everything in the East, including Maryland," and saw possibilities of taking Virginia, Florida and North Carolina, and Arthur Ballantine, former Undersecretary of the Treasury, who said the Federal budget has "got to be put right" and named Landon the man for the task.

Drought Deaths at 86; 120-Degree Mark Set; U. S. Plans Cash Relief

Funds Will Be Rushed to 170,000 Families in Stricken Areas.

Personal Survey Aim of Roosevelt

50,000 Farmers Will Go to Work Immediately on WPA Jobs.

By Sidney Olson.

President Roosevelt yesterday announced a vast program of immediate cash relief for 170,000 out of 204,000 drought-stricken families in the sun-ruined Northwest States.

Reading from a hastily drafted plan scrawled in blue ink on four small pieces of scratchpaper, the President declared:

He plans to make a personal survey of the drought area in mid-August in order to check up on the operation of the relief program, which is to be extended to the other 34,000 impoverished families as soon as possible.

50,000 to Go to Work.

Fifty thousand farmers will go to work at once on WPA jobs.

These farmers will do useful work—well-digging, dam-building and making farm-to-market roads, will be paid about $15 a week, and will be kept busy until the first snows.

The probable harvest of spring and winter wheat will total about 600,000,000 bushels and a carry-over of about 125,000,000 bushels, contrasted with the average annual consumption of about 625,000,000 bushels.

Fifty thousand farmers will receive subsistence loans and subsistence grants as soon as possible.

The Government will try to avoid buying up the livestock of the small-herd cattlemen, and will grant them loans to pay for the shipment of stock to feeding points, so that the cattlemen will retain titles to breeding stock.

The spring wheat crop has been so severely burned by the withering sun that it will amount to only about 15 per cent of normal.

Wheat acreage for this year was 10 per cent above the average wheat acreage for 1928-1932, and this answered critics of the New Deal who charge that shortage was due to Government curtailment. He said the same thing obtained in corn acreage.

The Administration is not thinking of and never has thought of depopulating the Northwest States.

Scout Migration Theory.

The President said no one in sound senses would dream of moving all the people out of the drought-stricken States. He said it had been proven that the depleted land could not be worked as wheatland, with the water table going down at a rate of 8 feet yearly. He added that the area could be brought under proper use to support a great many people, in cattle-raising, vegetable growing and forestation activities.

The Administration has spent more than $300,000,000 in relief and other drought-necessitated programs in that area the past three and a half years, he said, and would have to continue to spend large sums unless the economy of that region was changed, but that no sudden measures would be considered.

The President scoffed at the idea of a famine, or even of a food shortage, when he quoted the figures showing that the average consumption of about 625,000,000 bushels of wheat will be more than matched by a crop of about 600,000,000 bushels and the low carry-over of 125,000,000 bushels.

The relief plan already is moving so rapidly that 800 workers are being hired from drought-relief rolls a day in Minnesota; 2,000 a day in North Dakota; 2,800 a day in South Dakota; 300 to 400 daily in

Takes Farley's Post

WILLIAM W. HOWES.

Chairman Will Relinquish Cabinet Post During Campaign.

President Roosevelt announced yesterday that Postmaster General James A. Farley will take a leave of absence from his Cabinet position from August 1 until after the elections.

Farley, who talked the situation over with the President for two hours on the day before, is expected to swing into action today with a press conference at which he may outline the electioneering plans of the Democratic [illegible].

However, he will remain at his desk as Postmaster General until the first of August in order to prepare the annual profit-and-loss statement of the Postoffice Department.

Roosevelt to Be Absent.

Further, observers note, the President will be absent much of July on vacation, returning about August 1, so Farley's full-time assumption of his duties as chairman of the Democratic National and New York State Committees will coincide with the return of the party's head to Washington.

William W. Howes, of Huron, S. Dak., 49-year-old First Assistant Postmaster General, will become Acting Postmaster General in Farley's absence. His salary will not be increased, and the President announced Farley will receive no salary from his Cabinet office during his leave.

The President evaded questions as to whether Farley, after August 1, can solicit campaign contributions from Government workers.

Ends Speculation.

The announcement by the President at his press conference ended for the time at least, three years of press and public speculation over the propriety of Farley's status as a triple job holder.

Much hullabaloo has been raised over Farley's holding the chief working political office of his party at the same time he managed the Cabinet post that offered the greatest patronage possibilities. Observers pointed out that the President had issued an order forbidding this very thing, and claimed Farley's three-job status nullified the effect of the President's pronouncement. To some extent such criticisms are expected to disappear while Farley is concentrating on politics alone.

Mounting Total Blamed on Both Drownings, Prostrations.

Losses Estimated At 300 Millions

Corn Crop Failure May Add New Disaster; Markets Wild.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Ill., July 7.—Eighty-six deaths were counted tonight in the havoc wrought by record-breaking heat and month-old drought.

The deaths included at least 23 fatalities attributed to the intense heat, which scorched through its fifth consecutive day of better than 100-degree readings.

An official temperature of 120 degrees at Wishek, N. Dak., topped all marks for the 24-hour period of the heat's heaviest onslaught.

There also were more than 20 drownings as thousands sought refuge from the burning rays in lakes and rivers.

Seven detahs in the Peoria, Ill., area were laid to the 106-degree heat.

86 Deaths Reported.

Deaths were reported in the following States:

Heat—Ohio, 1; Wisconsin, 4; Iowa, 3; Minnesota, 5; Indiana, 1; North Dakota, 1; Illinois, 7; Michigan, 1; South Carolina, 1; Massachusetts, 1.

Drownings—Iowa, 9; Minnesota, 8; Wisconsin, 1; South Dakota, 1; Idaho, 1; Indiana, 1; Illinois, 1; New York State, 4.

Nebraska's death list since May 1 has included 3 from heat and 32 drownings, a number of them ascribed to efforts to seek relief from high temperatures. Kansas had one heat death Sunday and Missouri one Monday.

Early afternoon readings included an unofficial maximum of 118 at suburban Des Plaines and a record 102 for the year on the Municipal Airport thermometer at Chicago.

Added Disaster Feared.

The Weather Bureau in Washington announced no alleviation was likely for the next two or three days, increasing the pessimism of planters that corn's "critical period" might be resolved into added disaster.

In one of the wildest markets in months, wheat zoomed to a new high price for the season—a peak since August of the drought year of 1934—and then was whirled downward almost a cent below yesterday's close on an avalanche of selling orders.

Rainfall in the Saskatchewan sector of the drought territory was credited with causing the reversal. After selling as high as $1.10 a bushel, the first serious break in the dry-spell market ended with July delivery at 1.05⅝@1.05¾.

Corn Drops After Rise.

Corn rose to the 4-cent limit allowed here, but dropped back about 2 cents.

From the Rocky Mountains eastward through Indiana the punishing heat continued to pound at records of long standing. Bismarck's 114 degrees yesterday, Terre Haute's 106, and 112 at Devils Lake, N. Dak., were the hottest in the history of Weather Bureau there. Napoleon, in the latter State, reported 119 for the high mark yesterday.

With total drought losses estimated at about $300,000,000, the chief of the AAA replacement crop section, Joseph F. Cox, in Indianapolis, said hay and pasture were reduced in two-thirds of the States by lack of rain.

33,000 Families in Need.

At Lincoln, Nebr., regional offices of the Rural Resettlement Administration estimated 33,000 farm-families in the two Dakotas now were in need of help. It will supply emergency grants of $17.50 a month. A field trip through the territory, said Cal A. Ward, regional director, had convinced him thousands of the drought-burned acres "should never have been put to the plow."

Forest fires in Wyoming, Montana and South Dakota called several thousand men to battle against another enemy of vegetation in those areas. Nearly 1,500 attacked two blazes in the northern and western black hills of the latter State.

Soaring to the highest wheat price levels since August, 1934, then jolting in a drop of almost 6 cents a bushel, the grain market rose, then tumbled in pandemonium, reflecting conflicting ideas of values in the wake of the drought.

In one of the wildest markets in

Mob Fires Bus In Strike Row; 30 Are Injured

Three Other Vehicles Are Overturned Near Plant at Cincinnati.

By the United Press.

Cincinnati, Ohio, July 7.—Thirty persons were reported injured late today when a mob set fire to one bus and overturned three others carrying non-strikers from the Norwood plant of Remington-Rand, Inc., to their homes.

According to George J. Heitzler, chief deputy sheriff of Hamilton County, one of the buses was driven into the courthouse yard under a barrage of rocks and other missiles that smashed windows and left passengers cut and bleeding. Heitzler said the mob turned on the bus after it passed through lines of police and deputy sheriffs, guarding the plant entrances. He said practically all of the two score passengers were injured.

One driver was reported missing after his bus was surrounded. District police were told a shot was fired when the third bus was attacked and overturned. One man was reported shot, but this was not confirmed.

Another Bus Fired.

Another bus was set afire and the driver stoned when he found the road blocked by a huge timber thrown across the street.

In the confusion, one of the buses was said to have collided with two automobiles not involved in the strikes. Reports said the crowd dragged strikers from the bus before overturning it and smashing it.

Thomas Richards, Bellevue, Ky., a private detective employed as a guard at the plant, received hospital treatment for cuts about the face.

(The third battle in the three days the company has attempted to operate the plant, was followed by Manager H. T. Anderson's announcement that work would not be attempted Wednesday, according to the Associated Press. A crowd of 1,000 persons who besieged work-

Italian Count, Miss Wardman Marry Today

Helen Wardman, 24, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wardman, will marry Count Giovanni Naselli, Italian nobleman, in a quiet ceremony today at the Wardman residence, 2433 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

The count, who is 39 and an artificial silk manufacturer in Mexico City, is the son of Count and Countess Naselli Nobile di Savoni, of Rome. He has been married once before.

Count Naselli met Miss Wardman on one of his frequent trips to Washington. Announcement of the marriage came after the count flew here from Mexico City Sunday night.

The couple obtained the marriage license yesterday, naming Jesse C. Adkins as the officiating justice. After the ceremony the pair will leave by train for Mexico City, where they will make their home.

Miss Wardman's father is the real estate operator who was active in the building of the Wardman Park and Carlton Hotels here and of the Park Lane in London.

She attended the Holton Arms School, the Priory School in England and Mlle. Boissier's School in Paris. She was a debutante here in 1930.

Miss Wardman is a prominent member of the Junior League of Washington and has devoted much time to social service work at the Children's Hospital in connection with the league's activities there.

The bride will wear a simple afternoon frock of beige-pink crepe. With the frock, designed by Vionnet, she will wear a small hat trimmed with a veil of pink chiffon.

Mrs. Wardman will wear light blue chiffon. There will be no wedding breakfast or reception. Only members of the immediate family will be present.

Boy, 5, Lost 48 Hours in Wilds, Discovered Playing in Canyon

By the Associated Press.

Safford, Ariz., July 7.—Five-year-old Gordon Jensen was discovered unharmed in an almost inaccessible canyon of lion-infested Mount Graham today—48 hours after he had disappeared from a family picnic.

Tonight, exhausted, he rested in a hospital.

Barefooted, Gordon had wandere through rugged wilds two days and nights while 1,000 men searched for him. He was found playing, unconcerned and apparently happy, on the floor of a 1,000-foot-deep gorge.

He collapsed after the four-hour trip up the canyon walls, which he had descended alone, but physicians said he would recover.

"I want a drink," Gordon said when Sam Bennett, 15-year-old neighbor boy, came upon him playing in the underbrush.

Then he asked for his father and mother—Mr. and Mrs. Sam Jensen, of Safford.

Asked if he had seen any lions or bears, the child replied:

"No, but I saw lots of skunks."

He said he slept under rocks at night. He drank once from a creek, "but it didn't taste good and I didn't drink much." His jubilant parents tonight invited neighbors to a "free dance" at their farm home.

"We are nappy and thankful," the mother exclaimed. "We want everybody to come."

The parents had remained on the mountain summit with little rest since the child disappeared.

Ethiopians Kill 9 Italian Army Fliers In Plane Ambush

London, July 7 (AP).—A Reuter's (British) News Agency dispatch from Rome tonight said nine Italian officers, including the noted flier, Col. Antonio Locatelli, were killed from ambush when they alighted from a plane in Jimma Province, Ethiopia.

The dispatch said the officers had been invited to the province by local residents, to establish a garrison.

An unofficial report said the officers, in three machines, were attacked as soon as they landed.

The victims were said to have included a deputy chief of air staff, whose name was not given.

Jimma Province, southwest of Addis Ababa, is not yet completely occupied by Italian troops.

Rome, July 7 (AP).—An unidentified Italian air general and nine aviators, including the famous flier Antonio Locatelli, were killed in an Ethiopian scrape several days ago, reliable sources said tonight, despite official denial.

Reports the fliers were killed in an ambush could not be confirmed.

It was understood Premier Mussolini's orders were being awaited for the issuance of an authentic statement.

30 Firemen Gassed; Firebug Is Hunted

Norfolk, Va., July 7 (AP).—An explosive, spectacular three-alarm fire, possibly incendiary, razed the Industrial Chemical Co. plant early today, gassing more than 30 firemen with fumes generated in a stock of liquid chlorine by the intense heat.

Of the firemen overcome, three remained in hospitals tonight.

Two incendiary fires were discovered in the vicinity of the chemical company blaze, one before and one after the big fire.

Police and acting Deputy Fire Marshal J. T. Stewart, who have been on the trail of a firebug for some weeks, are redoubling efforts to capture him.

Interior Building's Jinx Strikes Again; 4 Burned by Tar

The "jinx" that has plagued workmen on the new Interior Department building struck again yesterday and four men were injured when they were thrown from a scaffolding into a pot of boiling tar when a rigging broke.

The men plunged about 10 feet from the scaffolding while they were installing air conditioning apparatus in the basement. The tar was under the scaffold.

Two of the men, Chester Donaldson, 30, 925 Shepherd street northwest, and Ernest Skinner, 30, of Silver Spring, Md., were taken to Emergency Hospital and treated for severe burns to their arms, legs and bodies. Their conditions were said to be serious.

The other men, Ray Fearson, 45, of 3210 Q street northwest, and Ray Lloyd, of 312 Seventeenth place northeast, received first aid on the scene. They were not seriously burned.

Yesterday's accident brought the toll of casualties on the new structure to nine, three other men having been killed, and two seriously injured since work began.

Old Kate, the Match-Seller, Dies; Virginian Once Toast of London

By the United Press.

London, July 7.—"Old Kate," Virginia-bred beauty who became the toast of London as a gayety girl, recklessly went through three fortunes and spent the last 14 years of her life selling matches within sight of the theaters where she once played leading roles, died today.

She was Katherine Lucille Foote, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Walter Foote, of Virginia and Washington, D. C. She alone knew her age, but she probably was well past 60. "Old enough," she used to tell her friends, the theatergoers and stage folk, who bought matches from her for a penny a box.

Instead of the 22-room mansion at Elgin Gardens, formerly London's most fashionable residential district, and the hundreds of thousands of dollars she had at the height of her career, "Old Kate" left an estate worth only a few shillings and consisting of a camp stool, a few cents in her worn-out black purse, several boxes of matches and some old clothes locked in the closet of a bleak room on the East End.

"Old Kate," who crossed the Atlantic more than 20 times and was one of the few survivors of the Titanic disaster, was married three times and was three times a widow. Each of her husbands, an Australian army captain, a nephew of a former Lord Mayor of London and a tobacco manufacturer, left her more than $100,000.

But the toast of the London stage spent the money as fast as it was left to her. She was a lavish hostess and an unlucky gambler. It was estimated that she lost more than $100,000 on the gaming tables of Monte Carlo.

She began her stage career in her late teens, joining a Philadelphia stock company. Later she got into vaudeville and when she was 20 came to London, the city which she later adopted as her "home."

After losing her fortune, however, "Old Kate" often desired to return to America, but said she would never go penniless.

Aid Says Borah Will Announce By End of Week

Gen. Longstreet's Widow Offers to Campaign for Republicans.

By the Associated Press.

Boise, Idaho, July 7.—Senator William E. Borah, Republican, will announce before Saturday that he will be a candidate for re-election to a sixth term, Ray McKaig, of Boise, his Presidential campaign field agent, said tonight.

Borah, who stated yesterday for the first time that he would support the Republican ticket and platform, declined comment on McKaig's statement.

McKaig, one of the three national Grange deputy masters, previously had been mentioned as a possible candidate for the Republican Senatorial nomination.

He said, however:

"I will not be a candidate, since Borah will seek re-election."

Block Slaps at New Deal.

New York, July 7 (AP).—Paul Block, newspaper publisher, said tonight business recovery "would have been here long ago if the Administrtaion was not continually passing or suggesting measures, many of them unconstitutional, which have preveted industry from planning for the future and thus retarded progress."

Speaking over the radio, the publisher said he believed the working people would vote for Gov. Alf M. Landon in November because the New Deal "has failed to restore employment, raised the cost of living and stifled business so that it could not increase wages and give more jobs."

"But we must not forget what is even more vital," he said, "and that is the preservation of our democratic form of government."

"Many of the things which Mr. Roosevelt and his socialistic colleagues are experimenting have been taken from foreign philosophy, and if the New Dealers are permitted to carry these ideas further, they are bound to lead us away from freedom into the life now existing in the countries mentioned."

Steiwer Heads Senate Group.

Chicago, July 7 (AP).—Senator Frederick E. Steiwer, of Oregon, keynoter of the Cleveland Convention, will direct the Republican campaign to win Senate seats in the West this fall, it was announced today.

John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, told interviewers Steiwer had been appointed vice chairman of the Republican Senatorial Committee with that assignment.

The committee is headed by Senator John G. Townsend, jr., of Delaware. Both he and Senator Steiwer conferred with Hamilton yesterday in the new national headquarters here.

Offices for the Senatorial siege will be maintained both in New York and in Chicago, Hamilton said.

Dickinson Attacks Relief.

The Administration's relief proposals for the sunbaked Northwest were criticized in a statement issued at national headquarters today by Senator L. J. Dickinson, of Iowa.

"The folly of buying produce from one State to replenish the drought-threatened store of another, limited in its production by Government edict, is just one of the ridiculous features of the New Deal that is beginning to be apparent to voters throughout this area."

Mrs. Helen Dortch Longstreet, widow of the famous Confederate general, has volunteered to take the stump in the Republican campaign, it was announced today by the party's headquarters.

Now past 70, Mrs. Longstreet lives in St. Thomas, Virgin Isles. Her husband, Gen. James Longstreet, died in 1904. History credits him with turning the battle of Bull Run to a Confederate victory. He also fought at Gettysburg, Chickamauga and in the battles of the Wilderness.

Hamilton told interviewers he had discussed the party's Eastern outlook by telephone with Senator James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania, and said:

"He tells me he never saw such a change in political sentiment as has taken place since the two conventions."

France Still Retains Statue of Liberty Deed

New York, July 7 (AP).—Through all the storms of half a century the Statue of Liberty had stood staunchly in New York Harbor—but it turned out today that the original deed of gift which the French intended to send along with the great shaft never reached America.

The fact that the deed still is retained in French archives was disclosed by the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Veterans of Foreign Wars, which is making plans to celebrate, on October 28, the fiftieth anniversary of the dedication of the statue. A photograph of the deed was used in the 1886 dedicatory ceremonies.

12 Reds Sentenced.

Bucharest, Rumania, July 7 (AP).—A military court today sentenced Anna Pauker and 11 companions to 10 years in prison for illegal communistic activity. The defendants described themselves as pacifists. Seven others were sentenced to terms of from 2 to 8 years.

Politics and People

By Franklyn Waltman.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT made a serious tactical error in not accepting the resignation of Postmaster General James A. Farley a year or more ago when it was offered to him. It was obvious at that time that Mr. Farley would be the generalissimo of the Democratic forces this year and that his trio of jobs would be made an issue.

WALTMAN.

Instead the President tarried too long about Mr. Farley's situation and the matter in the meanwhile has become an embarrassing issue to the Administration. To have let Mr. Farley step out of the Cabinet now would have been construed as a confession that he should have resigned many months ago.

So Mr. Roosevelt has compromised the matter by granting "Smiling Jim" a leave of absence until after the November election. It is doubtful whether Mr. Farley will return to the Postoffice Department, even if President Roosevelt is re-elected. This solution has from Mr. Roosevelt's viewpoint one merit—he does not have to fill the vacancy until after the November election and thus none will be embittered before that time and all aspirants will be encouraged to do their best in the campaign.

But granting Mr. Farley a leave of absence as Postmaster General does not eliminate him as an issue in the campaign. He will be very much of an issue. Already American political language has been enriched by the word, "Farleyize," which means to achieve a political objective through the use of patronage.

Sincere friends of the New Deal, such as Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, have held their noses because of Mr. Farley. Newspapers friendly to the Roosevelt Administration have urged that Mr. Farley either relinquish his Cabinet post or his political directorship. It is doubtful whether they will be satisfied with the President's solution of the problem.

The Republicans will point to Mr. Farley as the living—and horrible—example of all their contention that the Roosevelt Administration has delivered the Federal Government into the hands of spoilsmen. In the agrarian States they will parade Jim Farley as the city political slicker, the embodiment of all that is bad in metropolitan political machines.

The Republicans cannot be blamed for taking advantage of all the breaks and opportunities given to them by President Roosevelt. They would be foolish not to exploit Farleyism for all it is worth to them. But we believe that Jim Farley has been an unduly abused man. He is not nearly as bad as his critics make him out to be.

Jim Farley has no business being Postmaster General—had no business ever being appointed to that job. It is a strange thing that the chief political manager of a successful Presidential candidate should be placed at the head of the one agency of the Federal Government which should be run strictly as a business institution.

But it is an old political custom, practiced by the Republicans as well as the Democrats. Jim Farley is no worse than most of the other Postmaster Generals we have had. Indeed, he is much better than some. A fact generally overlooked is that in the interest of good government he foreswore an opportunity to play politics in a substantial way with the ocean and air-mail subsidies. These could have been exploited—and have been exploited—to great political advantage. But Mr. Farley turned his back on that and undertook to place those subsidies on a business-like basis.

Although he has not demonstrated any zeal or enthusiasm for expanding the civil service—or even maintaining in it as many Federal employes proportionately as when the New Deal started—Mr. Farley has claimed that he has never knowingly violated or sought by devious means to thwart civil service regulations. I have never heard that claim disputed by anyone familiar with the facts.

It is not possible to point an accusing finger at either the personal or public life of Jim Farley—except to say that he is a hard-boiled political practitioner. He plays politics hard in the same way that it has been played in this country for the last 50 years. He is smarter than most political managers. He believes that the fellows who take off their coats and work for the party's success should be rewarded with the jobs.

But he also stays within the rules of the game. Had Jim Farley come from Iowa, Nebraska or Michigan much less criticism would have been heaped on him in the last three years. It was because he came from New York—had received his political training in close proximity to Tammany Hall—that he became suspect.

But at the same time it seems incontrovertible that the man whose duty it is to keep the party machine well greased by distributing patronage, the man who has the task of satisfying disgruntled elements in the party and the man who necessarily must be more concerned over votes than principles should not be at the head of the Postoffice Department or any other department of government for that matter.

There is no reason why the national committees should not pay salaries—even large salaries—to their chairmen—and there is no reason why the honor of being national chairman of a political party should not be prestige enough for such officials.

Roosevelt Drops 'Quoddy Project

President Roosevelt has abandoned further efforts to continue the Passamoquoddy tidal power project in Maine and the Atlantic-Gulf ship canal in Florida, he announced at his press conference yesterday. Congress refused to appropriate money to continue the projects, started with Presidentially allocated relief funds.

What to do with the model villages and permanent Government-owned buildings that were constructed to house workers and project offices has become a difficult problem for the Administration. President Roosevelt said negotiations are in progress with the University of Florida in the hope that an extension of the university may be located in canal buildings. 'Quoddy Village, at Eastport, Me., built at a cost of several million dollars, presents greater difficulties because of its comparative inaccessibility and because of climatic conditions.

It has been rumored the village may be turned into a giant camp for needy women, under the policy of camps for women recently announced by Aubrey Williams, acting director of the Works Progress Administration. Sewing projects would be carried on in the larger buildings, and forests are nearby to provide light work similar to that carried on in CCC camps.

Colonist Is Voted Carnegie Medal

Palmer, Alaska, July 7 (AP).—One of Uncle Sam's colonists in the Matanuska Valley was told today he would receive the Carnegie hero medal.

Roy "Slim" Tipton, now a cafeteria dishwasher, risked his life last year in an attempt to save George Martin, of Seattle, from freezing to death in a blizzard while the pair was crossing Valdez glacier.

Martin, becoming exhausted, was unable to proceed. Tipton stayed with his friend until an airplane arrived with rescuers. Martin later died from exposure.

Because of frostbite, Tipton lost both feet and the use of an arm. His face also was disfigured. He received the announcement of the award from John C. Manning, inspector of the Carnegie hero fund commission, Pittsburgh, who came here to investigate Tipton's exploit.

Roosevelt Acts To Cut Expense In U. S. Units

Offers Saving Plan to Avoid Unnecessary Deficiency Appropriations.

A plan to save money in the regular departments of the Government, to avoid unnecessary deficiency appropriations by Congress, and to set aside funds within the departments to cover emergencies was enunciated by President Roosevelt at his press conference yesterday.

The plan, already in partial effect during the fiscal year 1936, when approximately $17,000,000 was saved in emergency agencies alone, will be extended and made more effective this year, the President said. All heads of executive departments, independent establishments, and other governmental agencies have received the following Presidential note:

"Now that all of the appropriation bills for the fiscal year 1937 have been enacted, you are requested, in preparing your apportionments of these funds, as called for by Treasury Department circular No. 494, Revision No. 3 of May 7, 1936, to set up substantial reserves for the purpose not only of effecting savings in appropriations where they can be made without detriment to the service, but to meet unforeseen needs that may arise during 1937 and thus provide for them without the necessity of supplemental appropriations."

One for Each Month.

Last year the President asked Department heads to divide their allowances into 12 categories—one for each month—and to divide them in such a way that a surplus would result. This year he is suggesting that a similar division into twelfths may be followed, but he seeks a larger dividend, or "kitty," to return to the Treasury at the end of the year. Next spring, he announced, an executive order would be issued asking department heads to "show cause" why the "kitty" should not be returned.

At the same time, President Roosevelt announced that Acting Director of the Budget Daniel W. Bell had informed all departments that estimates for next year's appropriations must not exceed the appropriation for this year. Estimates will be sent to the budget director by September 15, and he will spend the remaining time before Congress convenes on January 5, 1937, in preparing the Federal Government's budget for the fiscal year 1938.

Treasury experts yesterday were unable to estimate how much money would be saved through the President's policy of clipping bureau appropriations. They said many appropriations are available for expenditure for two or three years, making an accurate estimate impossible, but they said the saving to the Government would be "substantial."

Uruguayans Vote American League

Montevideo, Uruguay, July 7 (AP).—A proposal for an "American League of Nations" was approved today by the Uruguayan Chamber of Deputies.

The suggestion was made by Deputy Victore Haedo, during a speech in which he criticized suspension of Italian sanctions by the League at Geneva.

"The failure and discredit into which the League has fallen should force immediate reform of its Covenant as all countries on the American continent demand," Haedo declared. "If such is not done, it will become an instrument of four or five great powers in which little nations will have no importance."

He urged consideration of his proposal at the projected Pan-American conference called by President Roosevelt at Buenos Aires. His proposal was supported by more than a dozen other members of the chamber, and the deputies gave unanimous approval.

Cadman's Doctors Report 'No Change'

Plattsburg, N. Y., July 7 (AP).—With members of his family at the bedside, Dr. S. Parkes Cadman clung to a slender thread of life tonight with the same determination that carried him from Shropshire miner lad in England to internationally known churchman.

Peritonitis complicated his grave illness and surgeons held in abeyance plans to remove a ruptured appendix. Dr. Cadman underwent an emergency operation last night in the Champlain Valley Hospital, but attending surgeons said his "very critical" condition precluded relief beyond the insertion of two rubber tissue drains.

Dr. Lyman G. Barton, jr., who performed the operation, said tonight that the 71-year-old clergyman was "fully as well as he was last night."

"There has been no particular change in his condition during the day. He hasn't failed particularly, and that is slightly encouraging," Dr. Barton explained.

Landon on Social Security

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., July 7.—Text of the address of Gov. Alf M. Landon to the Kansas State Legislature today follows:

The primary purpose for calling this special session of the Legislature is that such action be taken as may be necessary to enable this State to provide for what we generally call social security.

Under section 4 of article 7 of the constitution of this State the obligation is placed upon the respective counties of the State to provide for persons who by reason of age, infirmity or other misfortune may have claims upon the sympathy and aid of society.

I am advised by the attorney general of the State and a large majority of the judiciary committee of the legislative council that under the constitution of our State the Legislature cannot pass valid laws under which the State itself may take a proper part in this public obligation. They advise me that in order to do so our State constitution must be amended. The reason for a special session at this time to consider the question of constitutional amendment is obvious. Such amendment can only be submitted at a general election and the notice must be published at least three months before such election.

Proposed amendments will be presented to you, which, if submitted by you and adopted by the people of this State, will enable the Legislature to pass laws providing for the necessary social security. I trust that a proper amendment, or amendments, will be submitted by you to the people of this State at the November election and will receive the approval of the electorate.

Such amendment should not, in my judgment, contain the details of a plan which may finally be adopted in this State. It should merely be a grant of power. The methods of administration have no part in the constitution of the State, but should be left to the wisdom and the sound judgment of the Legislature. This is the procedure followed in the original drafting of our constitution and the subsequent amendments. My confidence in the legislators of the State assures me that if this power is entrusted to them it will be exercised in a wise, sound and just manner, to the end that the obligation of the State to its less fortunate may be fulfilled and the rights of all of our people justly protected.

In considering proposed amendments, I desire to call attention to the fact that the platform of the Republican Party adopted at its national convention provides for a plan of social security different from the social security act adopted by Congress. I do not deem this a fitting time to enter into a discussion of the relative merits of the present act and the proposals set out in the Republican platform. Any proposed amendment to the Constitution should merely grant to the Legislature of the State the power to enact laws to enable this State to join in any such final act for this purpose as may ultimately become the settled law upon this question.

I do not believe that the present constitutional provisions for the care of the aged, infirm or other unfortunates should be repealed. By amendment we should provide merely a grant of additional power to the Legislature so that it may place the burden either locally or in the State, or both, as it may deem best or as may be necessary in order to cooperate with the Federal Government.

In the call for this special session an appropriation of money for needed public buildings was proposed. There is need for additional buildings at the Larned State Hospital and at the State Sanatorium for Tuberculosis, at Norton, and a replacement of the burned chemistry building at the Kansas State College of Agriculture and Applied Science at Manhattan and perhaps some others.

The State architect is working on plans and specifications for these proposed new buildings. Such plans will not be completed early enough for the construction of buildings to proceed during the winter months, even if this Legislature should make the necessary appropriations. For this reason I am not suggesting that appropriations be made now for this purpose. Inasmuch as the early construction of these buildings is necessary I shall endeavor to see that the tax levy for the current year is broad enough to include this construction. In the budget which will be submitted to the next Legislature by the executive department a recommendation will be made that these buildings be constructed at once. The Legislature will convene in regular session next January. If it shall decide to make appropriations for these buildings the funds will then be immediately available for the purpose.

I take this opportunity to express my sincere gratitude to the members of this Legislature for the many courtesies shown me, and the spirit of co-operation manifested in the consideration of constructive legislation. Kansas has benefited by the nonpartison statesmanlike service which you have rendered.

Legislative duty at this busy season of the year means great sacrifice to the members. I am confident the people of our State appreciate the individual self-denial now as well as the high character of your past performances.

Siamese Twin Dies Day After Sister

The babes were born yesterday at Clinic Hospital here, joined together with a bone fusion at the base of the brain. Annabelle lived but 15 minutes.

Norabelle clung to life more than 28 hours, but toxemia developed as the unpurified blood from the dead babe's body coursed through her little frame.

A Catholic priest christened Norabelle this morning and bestowed the name of Annabelle on the tiny body that lay in the crib with the sister soon to die.

Dr. J. B. Rogers, attending physician, predicted during the day death would come soon to Norabelle. The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Glick, were resigned to her fate, he said, and advised they did not wish an operation to sever the children, their first.

William Olcott Dies; Noted as Astronomer

Sunapee, N. Mex., July 7 (AP).—William Tyler Olcott, 63, of Norwich, Conn., noted astronomer, died last night of a heart attack while delivering an informal lecture to a small group of vacation friends.

Olcott was a graduate of Trinity College, Hartford, Conn., and of New York Law School. He was a member of the New York and Connecticut bar and the author of several works on astronomy.

N. J. Governor Denies Request For Ellis Parker

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., July 7.—Gov. Harold G. Hoffman refused today to extradite Ellis H. Parker, sr., Burlington County chief of detectives, to New York to face a charge of kidnaping Paul H. Wendel, who said he was forced to make a false confession of the Lindbergh baby kidnaping.

The Governor said accompanying affidavits, signed by Wendel and Murray Bleefeld, indicted with Parker, were "manifestly false." He said Wendel, "the principal complaining witness," was a disbarred lawyer and for many years had been a fugitive from New Jersey.

42 Years of Service.

"Placing the 42 years of devoted and zealous service of Ellis Parker, sr., to the State of New Jersey against the mendacity and criminality of Wendel," Hoffman said in a statement, "I could not in decency and honor have done anything but deny extradition."

Parker, who is 65, was indicted by the Kings County grand jury (Brooklyn) on June 3 and arrested that night as he strolled out of the Mount Holly, N. J., Elks Club. He has been under $500 bail pending extradition proceedings.

Parker, a long-time friend of Gov. Hoffman and nationally known for the famous crimes he has solved, shared the Governor's expressed doubts of the guilt of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, who was executed for the Lindbergh baby's murder.

The indictment and requested extradition of Parker furnished a sequel to the Hauptmann execution, which was delayed three days by a grand jury investigation of the eleventh-hour disclosure of Wendel's "confession" and repudiation.

Wendel was delivered to Mercer County (Trenton) authorities by Ellis Parker, sr., three days before the scheduled execution of Hauptmann.

No Appeal Possible.

There can be no appeal from Hoffman's refusal to extradite Parker, but District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan, of Kings County, informed previously the Governor had indicated he would not extradite, said:

Hoffman's term expires in January, 1938.

The indictment against Parker also named his son, Ellis H. Parker, jr., now a fugitive; Bleefeld, Martin Schlossman, his brother-in-law, and Harry Weiss, a Brooklyn taxicab driver. All were charged with kidnoping and second-degree assault. Parker, jr., has been sought since he was first indicted on April 23. The June 3 indictment superseded a previous one.

The indictment resulted from Wendel's story that on the night of February 14 he was kidnaped in Manhattan by four men and taken to a house he later identified in the Sheepshead Bay District of Brooklyn. He said he was held there for 10 days and tortured into "confessing" the kidnaping.

Wendel to Press Fight.

New York, July 7 (AP).—Paul H. Wendel said tonight he would ask the Federal Government to invoke the Lindbergh antikidnaping law against Ellis Parker, sr., as a result of Gov. Hoffman's refusal to extradite the detective to Brooklyn.

"In the interest of justice and to prevent others from being kidnaped and tortured into confessing something of which they are entirely innocent," he said, "I believe that it is my duty to continue fighting for law and order and to bring Ellis Parker, his son, and others to answer for their violation of law and disrespect for human rights.

"If this makes it impossible to proceed in Brooklyn courts, I shall ask District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan to present the entire case to the Federal Government for action under the Lindbergh law."

Wendel declared he was the victim of a scheme to make Gov. Hoffman the Republican Vice Presidential candidate, Detective Parker, "the greatest detective of his time," and Bruno Richard Hauptmann a free man.

Chauffeur Admits Killing of Fireman

Indianapolis, July 7 (AP).—A signed confession that he killed Harry R. Miller, retired Cincinnati fire captain, and dismembered his body—exonerating the dead man's 66-year-old eccentric sister, Flora, who had been held for questioning—was made tonight to Indiana State police by Heber L. Hicks, former Kentucky convict and Miss Miller's chauffeur.

Announcement of the confession was made by Capt. Matt Leach of the State police in a long distance telephone call from Seymour, Ind., where the final questioning of Hicks in the "head and hands" killing of the wealthy retired fire captain was carried on.

Hicks said he shot Miller in the latter's farm home at New Trenton, Ind., then took the body to Kentucky where he cut off the head and hands, placed them in a box of concrete and dropped them in a lake near Carrollton. The torso was stuffed into a culvert near Eminence, Ky. The torso first was discovered and then two boys in swimming made the gruesome find of the head and hands. Identification was made by clothing on the body and dental work in the mouth.

A brief but furious battle took place near Cleveland when about 1,000 pickets hurling stones, halted a number of heavily-screened buses carrying non-strikers from the Remington-Rand plant, which was closed after this battle in which 30 were injured. Pickets can be seen placing heavy timbers in the path of the bus.

Rockefeller, 97 Today, to Have Birthday Cake

By the Associated Press.

Lakewood, N. J., July 7.—John D. Rockefeller's Swedish cook tonight baked a large cake on which were placed 97 small candles in honor of her employer's birthday tomorrow.

The cake was big because the man who turned oil into millions of dollars planned to share it with the staff of his Lakewood estate, Golf House.

That, however, will be as far as the servants will share in the birthday observances unless they chance to meet Rockefeller in the halls of the mansion.

If they do, they will felicitate him on reaching another milestone of his goal—he has expressed a desire to become 100 and then "really live"—but otherwise they will treat the day as any other in the well-ordered household.

Rockefeller himself will spend the day much as he spends any other, attaches said.

He ordinarily arises about 7 o'clock each morning, has breakfast in bed and listens as his secretary or valet reads the morning newspaper.

A nap invariably follows lunch, succeeded in turn by an automobile ride if the weather is favorable, reading, listening to the radio and sitting quietly.

Rockefeller was born in Richford, Tioga County, N. Y., on July 8, 1839. Martin Van Buren then was President of a Nation of 17,000,000 souls.

Appeals for Troops.

Middletown, Conn., July 7 (U.P.).—Mayor Leo B. Santangelo said tonight he had appealed to the State government for 50 troopers to protect nonstrikers at the Remington Rand plant here.

Following a conference with Police Chief Charles Anderson, the mayor said no congregations of strikers would be permitted from now on in the plant area.

The mayor's action came after a mob of 500 strikers stoned a busload of workers leaving the plant, seriously injuring two of the occupants.

The mob also battled with police.

Police charged a crowd of about 500 strikers and clubbed many of them with night sticks.

Miss Myrtle Way, 18, Middlefield, one of the bus riders, was struck on the head with a rock. Taken to Middlesex Hospital, she was said to have suffered skull injuries.

Her condition is serious.

Police said they were holding Anthony Russo, 24, Middletown, on open charges as a result of the mass attack on the bus.

The violence followed a day of stonings in which houses of five workers at the plant, which was reopened a few days ago after a five weeks' strike, were damaged.

came from the mother of Capt. Rohde. Al Denmark heard the announcement over the radio last night.

In a long-distance call to Washington yesterday Mrs. Owen confirmed her bethrothal, but would make no further comment. In New York her friends said she was out of town on a brief visit.

Striking in appearance and extremely popular with the King, his court and the Danish people, Mrs. Owen became Minister at Copenhagen in 1933.

According to the Associated Press Mrs. Owen met Capt. Rohde at King Christian's New Year's court ball last January. They danced together. Rohde is one of the best dancers at the Danish court.

The Danish perss featured the announcement tonight, but the only editorial comment was that the United States minister was sealing the high regard she often has expressed for this country by marrying a Dane.

She will not lose her citizenship by marriage to the Danish officer, authorities here said yesterday. Consequently she will not have to resign her diplomatic post unless she chooses.

In addition, she will gain Danish citizenship the Danish Consulate in New York pointed out.

Surprise Romance.

Diplomats asserted yesterday that announcement of the engagement came as a surprise. Members of the United States Legation staff declared they had no official knowledge of the affair.

Mrs. Owen has announced she intends to participate in President Roosevelt's campaign for re-election.

Her bridegroom-to-be asked for and received permission of the foreign office in Copenhagen to wear his uniform while abroad, presumably at the wedding.

This consists of a tall, bearskin cap, a scarlet jacket and light blue trousers, striped with silver. Capt. Rohde is entitled to wear the decoration of a Knight of the Belgian Order of the Crown, conferred upon him by the late King Albert of Belgium in 1926.

As a youth he entered the Danish army in 1915. He succeeded to the King's Guard in 1924, and became a captain in 1932. His title of "Kammerjunker" was conferred in 1928. It is granted only to officers of the King's Guard and the Royal Hussars.

The life of Mrs. Owen has sparkled since her extreme youth with the zest and glamour of greatness.

As a girl in Nebraska she rode on campaign trains with her noted father, and she turned a willing hand toward helping him edit and publish his famous paper, The Commoner.

Divorced in 1909.

Her first marriage was to William Homer Leavitt, an artist. They were divorced in 1909, and next she married Maj. Reginald Owen, of the British Royal Engineers.

She spent her young womanhood in the Levant as nurse in the voluntary aid detachment of Britain's Egypt-Palestine campaign, where her husband contracted a lingering illness.

After the war, she turned lecturer to earn a living for her invalid husband, and once more the silver tongue of the Bryans reached the people when she entered the Chautauqua-Lyceum Field.

She then became a public speaking teacher at the University of Miami, Fla. Her husband died in 1927 in Miami.

She became Congresswoman from Florida in 1930, but in 1932 was defeated in the primaries. The following year President Roosevelt made her Minister to Denmark.

Mrs. Owen has two children by each of her former marriages.

Alfonso's Son To Charge Wife Ignored Vows

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 7.—Breaking of pre-marriage vows—made in return for the Count of Covadonga's sacrifice of his rights as crown prince of Spain—will be charged against his beautiful Cuban wife, it was learned today, when his marriage annulment suit is filed tomorrow.

One of the allegations will be that the former Edelmira Sampedro promised to live in the United States when the former crown prince warned her his father, former King Alfonso, would cut him off for marrying a commoner and therefore he could earn a living only in this country.

Another allegation is that the count told her he suffered from "the disease of kings"——hereditary haemophilia—and he therefore required "her constant attendance and aid in ministering to his wants."

The countess, it will be charged, promised to fulfill this requirement but failed to do so. She was warned, the papers will state, that the count was not interested in social life.

As a sufferer from haemophila the count is in danger of bleeding to death from the slightest cut. His life was despaired of several times when he lived with the countess in Havana from last November until March. He was reported suffering from a tumor on one leg and was ill again about a month ago.

Gottfried Schweizer, nurse to the count for five years, said the countess insisted on remaining with her family in Havana and that she often differed with him over treatment for the count.

In the count's presence his attorneys issued a formal statement today describing recurring reports that he intends to marry Marta Roca-Rocafort, Cuban artist's model, as "wholly without foundation."

Announcing plans to file suit tomorrow and the serving of papers on the countess in Havana today, the attorneys stated "at the proper time it will be conclusively shown the count was imposed upon by the countess."

They denied former King Alfonso or former Queen Victoria "are taking any active interest in this matter."

Roosevelt Yacht Rammed in Port

Portsmouth, N. H., July 7 (AP).—A fishing boat rammed the yacht Sewanna, on which President Roosevelt and three of his sons will cruise next week, as she lay at a wharf undergoing engine repairs today. The bow was slightly dented 4 feet above the water line.

The Sewanna, which President Roosevelt is expected to board at Pulpit Harbor, Me., next Monday, put in at the wharf and Capt. Elden Colbert reported the engine trouble to the Portsmouth Navy Yark.

The injury to his boat, Capt. Colbeth said, will not interfere with the trip.

Wardell Named Receiver for 5 District Banks

Justus S. Wardell, former San Francisco broker and surveyor of the customs, has been appointed by J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency, as receiver of the District National Bank and four other closed banks in this city, it was announced yesterday.

Wardel succeeds Norman R. Hamilton, of Portsmouth, Va., who resigned to enter the Congressional contest in the Second Virginia District. He is opposing Colgate W. Darden, jr. incumbent.

Assets Were $6,203,736.

According to the receiver's quarterly report of December 31, 1935, assets of the five banks were $6,203,736.55. Since then, it is understood, some of the assets have been liquidated.

At present Wardell is examining the remaining assets, a task he expects will take at least a month. He said yesterday he intended "to expedite a settlement as quickly as possible."

The new receiver believes there has been a general improvement in economic conditions throughout the United States.

"However," he said, "while security values have increased, there must be a greater improvement in the durable industries in order to round out recovery."

Active in Coast Politics.

Wardell, mentioned at the beginning of the Roosevelt Administration as a possible choice for Secretary of the Interior, is a native of California and has been active there in finanical circles and Democratic politics. He is former editor and publisher of the San Francisco Daily Journal of Commerce and for many years headed the San Francisco brokerage and banking firm of Wardell, Taylor, Dunn & Co.

He was a member of the California State Assembly from 1899 to 1901, was surveyor of customs in San Francisco from 1913 to 1917, and collector of internal revenue in the First California District from 1917 to 1920. In 1926 he was Democratic candidate for Governor of California.

While serving as surveyor of customs in San Francisco he became acquainted with Hamilton, then customs collector at Norfolk, Va.

Hamilton has had charge of the closed banks since November, 1933. He is owner and publisher of the Portsmouth Star and is active in Virginia politics.

Dill Loses Point As Divorce Suit Ends Abruptly

Attorneys Fail in Attempt to Show Wife Openly Assailed Roosevelt.

By the Associated Press.

Spoane, Wash., July 7.—Former Senator C. C. Dill's sensational divorce suit ended abruptly today with an unsuccessful attempt of his attorneys to show that the wealthy Mrs. Dill openly assailed President Roosevelt in March, 1935.

Superior Judge W. E. Huneke said he would decide the case "in a few days."

Mrs. Dill, former suffragist leader, denied she muttered to her husband, "smile, d—n you, smile," and the former Senator testified he never again wanted to live with her.

"She set out to ruin me," he said, "but I'm not going to be ruined. I am not going to live with her and I don't ever want to associate with her."

Mrs. Dill testified yesterday she would be willing to "forgive and forget if he wants me to."

When Dill's attorney, Thomas A. E. Lally, asked her about the "smile, d—n you, smile" remark Mrs. Dill answered:

"I did not say that. I muttered under my breath the words of the song, 'Smile, D—n You, Smile.'"

"Did you say 'darn' or 'damn'?" Lally demanded.

"I said 'd—n' just like the song. I don't know what goes between the letters."

During a recess yesterday Mrs. Dill turned to newsmen and commented that her husband had not smiled once during the nine-day trial.

When Lally said he would show that Mrs. Dill attacked President Roosevelt in the presence of witnesses, Frank Graves, her attorney, objected successfully. Both sides then rested, without offering argument.

Escaped Convict Identified by U. S.

Richard Terrill Truman, committed to the Colorado State penitentiary Monday, was identified yesterday as T. B. Atkinson, escaped convict and murderer, by the Department of Justice.

Atkinson escaped from the State penitentiary in Huntsville, Tex., June 19, where he had been sentenced to life imprisonment for habitual criminality. In making his break for freedom he killed a guard, agents said.

He was arrested at Canon City, Colo., last week after threatening to kidnap an aged woman. A car he was driving ran over and killed a young boy in trying to escape.

His fingerprints then were sent to the Department of Justice here where he was identified as Atkinson wanted in Texas. Earlier while an inmate of the State penitentiary in Baton Rouge, La., he escaped, but later was recaptured.

What you should know about gin

MATCH THIS FOR BALANCE!
Perfectly balanced gin flavor is insured by Hiram Walker's exclusive Controlled Condensation process — during which nearly a dozen different flavor ingredients are distilled together with 100% grain spirits.

TALK ABOUT A DIFFERENCE
There's a vast difference between old-fashioned and modern methods of distilling—and between various brands of gin. You certainly can taste the finer flavor in Hiram Walker's Gin, the only gin in the world distilled by the exclusive ControlledCondensation process.

FROM THE LAND OF BOLEROS and from four continents Hiram Walker gathers gin ingredients. Hiram Walker makes it a point to distill its gin from the actual fruits, herbs and berries—together with 100% grain spirits.

JUNE JULY AUG. SEPT. OCT.
ALWAYS THE SAME
Gin ingredients vary in flavor strength from month to month, according to soil and sunlight. Hiram Walker's Controlled Condensation process measures and compensates for such variations in each distillation formula. That's why Hiram Walker Gin always tastes the same.

ON THE LOOKOUT
A test run in a miniature or "pilot" still precedes the distillation of each run of gin. This insures the flavor being right.

France Drives To Put an End To Strike Raids

Serves Warning as Workers Imprison 2 Directors of Motor Concern.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, July 7.—France served official notice tonight she would keep strikers from occupying places of business—even as angry motor plant workers were reported to have seized and imprisoned two company directors.

Roger Salengro, minister of the interior, told the Senate, just before the government received a 230-to-1 vote of conference:

"The government will put into action all appropriate means to put an end to the occupations."

The newspaper Le Journal, coincidentally, said strikers at the Citroen automobile factory near Chaumont, had locked up two company directors after the latter refused demands for the dismissal of two engineers. The men were released, government officials said, after three hours' capitvity.

New Offensive Feared.

Warnings of a "new offensive" being prepared by the extreme Left were heard from Senator Henry Lemery, former minister of justice, who is a member of the comparatively moderate Radical Socialist Party.

"In several months we shall see "We are only having a respite now." a decisive movement," said Lemery.

Striking at the extreme right, the government started prosecution of Rightist League leaders on charges of inciting to riot and attempting to reorganize dissolved groups such as the "Croix de Feu."

Charges Are Aired.

A court opened a "John Doe" investigation into charges that Col. Francois de la Rocque and other chiefs of the so-called Fascist Leagues had summoned their followers to demonstrate in Sunday's clash in the Champs Elysees, in which scores of persons were injured.

De la Rocque, disclaimed any intention of starting sanguinary rebellions and said the members of his new "Social" party were "patriotic Frenchmen; we stand for order."

The tenseness of the political situation resulted in a careful watch by troops and gendarmes at Ajaccio, Corsica, where several persons were injured in clashes last night.

To Break Bank Control.

On the financial front the finance minister, Vincent Auriol, disclosed that the government intended to break control of the Bank of France by "two hundred families." The board of regents will be replaced by a new committee of directors, he said.

Auriol told the Chamber of Deputies finance committee the bank group would be composed of 30 members, one-third to be named by the government, one-third by the national economic council and one-third by the shareholders. All nominations will be subject to government ratification.

Eden Ordered By His Doctor To Take a Rest

By the Associated Press.

London, July 7.—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, who more than a year ago was forced to leave government office for a month to recuperate from heart strain, tonight was ordered by his physician to take a week's rest.

A foreign office announcement stated, "Mr. Eden, on the advice of his doctor, has decided to take a week's rest in the country. Viscount Halifax (Lord Privy Seal) will act for Mr. Eden in his absence."

Although the announcement did not say whether the foreign secretary had had a recurrence of his heart ailment, for months past he has been under a heavy strain likely to aggravate his old condition.

Eden, along with Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, and other cabinet ministers, has been subjected to strong criticism recently as a result of a series of events in foreign affairs which culminated in Great Britain taking the lead for abolition of sanctions.

Demands have been made by the opposition for his resignation, and politicians wondered whether Eden's week of rest might be a preliminary to the announcement of his retirement.

So far as was known, however, the foreign secretary has no such intentions.

Green Scores Steel 'Rebels'

fighting the committee for industrial organization, now engaged in this major effort, the shame of such a dishonorable action will lie on the heads of Mr. Green and his irreconcilable associates."

"Thwarted Purpose."

Of prime significance in the statement by Green was this sentence:

"It is to be sincerely regretted that the Committee for Industrial Organization thwarted the purpose of the American Federation of Labor to inaugurate an organizing campaign in the steel industry, behind which the American Federation of Labor would have mobilized the united support and pooled resources of organized labor."

This was taken to mean that the federation would not contribute from it bulging war chest to the $500,000 fund now being raised by Lewis to organize the steel workers. At no time, however, although realizing that the federation could raise a great sum of money for such a campaign, has Lewis shown the slightest desire to compromise with the federation, observers have noted.

Opposes Divided Energy.

Green's statement said, in part:

"Instead of making possible the concentration of all material, moral and economic forces of the organized workers and all their friends behind an irresistible organizing campaign in the steel industry, recognized spokesmen of the C. I. O. denounced the American Federation of Labor, charging it with pursuing "a dog in the manger" policy, and portrayed it as a barrier blocking the efforts of the steel workers to become organized.

"They are now finding what the executive council of the American Federation of Labor always knew—that any organizing campaign in the steel industry, to be successful, should be carefully organized, skillfully planned and behind it placed every ounce of strength and energy, financial and economic, which the solid united, organized labor movement could supply.

"This fact has been made quite clear during the last few days through the announcement made by the representatives of the steel corporations through the Iron and Steel Institute. The attitude which they have assumed and the statements they have made can be interpreted as meaning only that they understand no language except the language of force."

Lewis' Speech Praised.

Lewis' desk yesterday was thick with letters and telegrams from many parts of the country praising his radio speech of the previous night and pledging allegiance and aid to the organizing drive. In the address he had said the United Mine Workers and the C. I. O. would not tolerate tactics employed previously by steel corporations in breaking strikes.

In Birmingham, Ala., the Associated Press reported, several hundred employes of the Republic Steel Co.'s plant met and voted defiance to Lewis' campaign to organize them. After hearing speakers denounce Lewis and industrial unionism, the employes lauded company unions and issued a warning to "outside agitators."

Danzig Spurns League Chief's Peace Efforts

Nazi Regime to Ignore All Commissioner Requests; Demands Changes.

By the Associated Press.

Free City of Danzig, July 7.—Any communications from the League of Nations high commissioner will find their way quickly to the waste basket, Dr. Arthur Karl Greiser, Nazi head of the Free City's senate, indicated tonight.

Furthermore, it was made plain Sean Lester, the commissioner, will be socially ostracized by the Nazis and any request he may make will be received with stony silence.

Thus, the Nazi regime disclosed, it wishes to demonstrate the League commissioner is "more than superfluous" in the conduct of Danzig affairs.

Lester came back home today from Geneva, where Dr. Greiser, before the League of Nations Council, gave the Nazi salute, thumbed his nose at newspapermen and demanded a change in League relations with Danzig.

A huge cordon of troops was thrown around the railway station, but there was no untoward incident as Lester, his wife and children, alighted and, refusing a motor car, walked to the commissioner's office.

Coincidentally, Nazi leaders hinted they would not invite Lester to any social functions under their auspices or those of the Government. The Nazi press was forbidden to mention his return.

Copies of the Volkzeitung, organ of the oppositional Catholic Center Party, were confiscated today.

(The official press of Poland, which has jurisdiction over Danzig harbor and customs, announced today separation of the Free City from the League of Nations was "not acceptable to Poland."

Sailors Fired for Union Help, McGrady Told

By the Associated Press.

Joseph Curran and two other New York sailors told Labor Department officials yesterday that steamship companies had blacklisted 200 to 300 seamen involved in last spring's strike.

Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary, told them to send him five or six specific examples, and he would investigate the complaint.

The Labor Relations Board yesterday ordered the Clyde-Mallory Steamship Line to re-employ dockhands who, the board said, were discharged for union activity last fall in Tampa, Fla.

Program to Organize Ships' Officers Drawn

New York, July 7 (AP).—The United Licensed Officers, a three-year-old group, today announced it was clearing the decks for an organizing campaign on the Atlantic and Gulf coasts designed to bring into one association Marine officers from bridge to engine room.

The association explained that its ultimate objective was to build the strongest unit possible to go before a Federal commission to be appointed under the new ship subsidy bill with power to prescribe minimum manning and wage scales.

Miner Is Held In Good Friday Bomb Deaths

By the Associated Press.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., July 7.—Postal inspectors today charged Michael Fugmann, 52-year-old anthracite miner, with the "Easter gift" bombings which last April took three lives in this section.

Fugmann was arrested four days ago, it was learned, at a hospital, where he was recovering from mine injuries and had been held in secret for more than 100 hours. Following the arrest, his home was raided.

Today he was brought before Judge John S. Fine and arraigned on ten charges, three for the murders of Michael Gallagher, cemetery sexton; Thomas Maloney, former president of the now disbanded United Anthracite Miners of Pennsylvania, and Thomas Maloney, Jr., 4.

Held Without Bail.

After the hearing State troopers hustled Fugmann off to jail, where he was ordered held without bail by Judge Fine.

In court Fugmann maintained innocence of sending the bombs, which were mailed from the central postoffice in this city on the eve of Good Friday and delivered the next day, dealing death and injury and shocking the sanctity of Holy Week in the Wyoming Valley.

"My heart is clean," Fugmann told Judge Fine. He snapped out "No" as each warrant was read.

District Attorney Leon Schwartz said that the cigar boxes in which the bombs were mailed and nails in the boxes were identical with boxes and nails found in Fugmann's home.

Held Bombs Stolen.

The materials found in the suspect's home were compared from intercepted bombs which had been mailed to Judge Benjamin R. Jones, former Sheriff Luther Kniffin, Ray H. Gouldstone, a mine superintendent, and James A. Gorman, umpire of the anthracite cociliation board.

Fugman's attorney, E. F. McGovern, pleaded innocence for his client, claiming that the bombs had been stolen from Fugman's car.

Margaret Maloney, whose father and younger brother were killed by the bombs, was called to the stand to tell about the blast. She walked with a limp as she crossed the court room. She was hurt in the explosion.

But Attorney McGovern stopped her testimony with the statement that it would not be necessary.

British Chief Warns Palestine Terrorists

Jerusalem, July 7 (Palcor Agency).—Sir Arthur Grenfell Wauchope, high commissioner of Palestine, warned the population in a radio talk tonight that the government would continue to employ military force to combat terrorism.

He also warned the Arabs, who have sought to bring about a discontinuance of the Jewish national home policy, that they would not gain their ends by violence.

(The Jewish Telegraphic Agency reported one Jew was killed and eight Jews and four Britons wounded in Jerusalem and Tel Aviv today.)

Financier and Diplomat Is Confident His Country Will Triumph in Japanese Invasion; Sees Communist Defeat.

Dr. Changting T. Wang, Chinese cabinet member, Yale graduate, president of Rotary International in the Far East, head of the China National Amateur Athletic Federation, financier, coal operator, diplomat and third generation Christian, was in town yesterday. He will leave shortly for Berlin, for the Olympic games.

Bespectacled, his hair graying about the temples, he sat with a Phi Beta Kappa key dangling from his watch chain in his Shoreham Hotel suite and turned a keen mind on world problems.

"Everybody hates Japan," he said suavely. "Of course, not the Japanese people. They are helpless. I admire the way they put love of state above everything, but I don't like the way they are trampled down by the militarists."

Invasion Uniting Nation.

The man who has been high in government circles ever since he graduated from Yale in 1910 refused to make any predictions about the future of the Japanese invasion, save to say that it was rapidly uniting the nation. He added:

"Remember, the Chinese have survived for 28 centuries. The Mongolians swooped down on our country much the same way as the Japs are doing now. It took 10 centuries of fighting, but we finally got rid of them."

He puffed quietly at a fat Manila cigar as if ten centuries was not very long to wait. We Americans are very young, was his comment.

"It is my personal opinion," he resumed, "that history will repeat itself. We always come back, as you say in America, and we come back stronger than before."

He said that the feverish manner in which England is fortifying Singapore showed that she realized she would have to decide now whether she wants to lose to Japan investments of more than $3,000,000,000 in the Far East, and perhaps India and even Australia.

Not Depending on Others.

"But we are not depending upon the help of either Britain or Russia," he added, hastily. "Our future lies within ourselves."

He scouted reports that Communism was sweeping South China.

"I admire the Communist leaders there because I admire anyone who puts up a good fight. But Communism will never flourish in China. We tried it 2,200 years ago."

Although he vividly recalled the "very likable" personality of President Roosevelt, who had been his host when Dr. Wang was en route to the Versailles Peace Conference in 1919, the diplomat suavely parried all questions on the New Deal.

About his 70 athletes, whom he was accompanying to Berlin, he said:

"It is the second time China has entered the Olympics. Our men will make a good showing, but we know none of them can win. We looked up the records."

Girl Flier Reported Wed to Financier

New York, July 7.—A close business associate of Floyd B. Odlum, head of the vast Atlas Corporation, said today Odlum and Jacqueline Cochran, an aviatrix, had been married "several months ago" in California.

Odlum and his wife, Mrs. Hortense McQuarric Odlum, were divorced last October in Minden, Nev. She is president of Bonwit Teller, Inc., a New York department store.

The Atlas Corporation is an investment company. It was built up by Odlum from a $40,000 stake in 12 years to a $100,000,000 company.

Flying over Indianapolis last Friday at an 8,000-foot altitude, she was forced to an emergency landing when her plane caught fire.

Odlum could not be reached immediately. He was aboard his yacht on a cruise, friends said.

Guards Slay Suspect In Theft of $25,000

Santiago, Cuba, July 7 (AP).—Reports reached this city today that rural guards pursuing two postal employes accused of stealing a Royal Bank of Canada money shipment of $25,000 at Bayamo several days ago, had killed one man of a group that fled from a mountain hideout when the soldiers tried to arrest them. The dead man was identified as Emilio Morales Borrero.

Capital Awaits New Occupants At 3 Embassies

By Dudley Harmon.

New neighbors will soon be moving in at three of the embassies on Sixteenth street and at several of the legations elsewhere in the city. Washington will see many new faces in the diplomatic set as the social season opens, and will also greet a few friends in diplomatic circles who have served here before and are returning to the Capital to fill new posts.

Among the latter will be Senor Juan Cardenas, who will succeed Senor Luis Calderon, recently appointed envoy to Moscow, as Ambassador of Spain. Senor Cardenas and his wife are both well known in Washington, as they were here for 10 or 12 years in two different periods of service.

Senor Cardenas came first as secretary of the embassy at the beginning of his diplomatic career, and was later counselor. He then was transferred to Berlin; was appointed as Minister to Japan, and returned to America as Ambassador in 1932. After leaving here he was made Ambassador to France and will come here from Paris.

Senora de Cardenas is a sister of the noted beauty, Mme. Frederic Nano, whose husband was for several years counselor of the Rumanian Legation. Senor and Senora de Cardenas have one son.

The present Ambassador served as commercial counselor of the embassy here before his appointment as Ambassador two years ago. He and Senora de Calderon, who returned Monday night from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., where they spent a few days, plan to remain in the Capital until autumn.

Opposite the Spanish embassy are the Italian and Polish embassies, both of which also will be presided over by new ambassadors and their wives, Count and Countess Potocki, who will arrive from Poland in the fall and Signor and Signora Fulvio Suvich, the date of whose arrival has not been announced.

A large "for rent" sign on the lawn of the Legation of the Dominican Republic in the next block from the Spanish Embassy excited speculation as to whether or not the Minister and Senora de Pastoriza were about to leave Washington. It was explained, however, that the sign does not refer to the legation, but to an apartment back of it, and the Minister and Senora de Pastoriza not only do not contemplate moving from Washington, but will remain in the Capital all summer.

Another new envoy, the date of whose arrival here is as yet indefinite, is Dr. Diogenes Escalante, who was appointed Bolivian Minister to this country last month. Dr. Escalante is described as having a thorough knowledge of English, as he was Minister to London from 1915 until recently. He is a lawyer by profession, and has served as minister of the interior under the present Bolivian government. He will be accompanied to the Capital by his wife and their two daughters, both of whom were educated in London and Paris.

Dr. Escalante succeeds Senor Dr. Don Enrique Finot, who will leave with Senora de Finot the middle of the month to return to Bolivia.

Many are speculating as to who will succeed the former Minister of Venezuela, Senor Don Juan Jose Mendoza, who left Washington only a few weeks after his arrival, to return to Venezuela as a member of the supreme court there. The most likely candidate, it is said, is Senor Luis Quachalla, former minister for foreign affairs, who spent some time in this country as a child.

Drama of War To Be Given On C. U. Lawn

Blackfriar's Guild to Present 'Smilin' Thru' Tonight on Campus.

"Smilin' Thru," famous drama of the World War, will be presented tonight on the campus of Catholic University by the Blackfriar's Guild.

The lawn between McMahon and Gibbons Hall, will serve as a stage and opening curtain time has been set at 7:30. It is the first time a dramatic presentation has been given by the University in a sylvan setting.

"Smilin' Thru" was last presented by the Blackfriars at the Sylvan Theater on the Washington Monument Grounds on June 25. That presentation was sponsored by the Community Center Department.

Production of the play will be under direction of the Rev. Thomas Fabian Carey, O. P., Ph. D., member of the faculty of the summer session. The play will be given for the students of the summer session. However, the public also is invited.

Players in the production will be Arthur Van, Edgar Kloten, Dorothy Davidson, M. Myers, Gordon Potter, Stephen Trodden, Marguerita Nordstrom, Stephen Trodden and Nell Orton.

Written by Allan Langdon Martin, "Smilin' Thru" is the story of two lovers kept apart during the World War by hatred and enmity of their families—a feud that emanated years before either of them was born.

Vast Drought-Aid Plan Drawn

Montana, and about 2,400 a day in Wyoming.

Leaders in Conference.

Rexford G. Tugwell, resettlement administrator and Undersecretary of Agriculture; Jesse W. Tapp, assistant AAA administrator in charge of the interdepartmental drought committee; J. B. Hutson, acting AAA administrator, and Aubrey Williams, assistant WPA administrator, were present at the President's press conference yesterday.

They had been meeting with Roosevelt for nearly two hours when reporters arrived. The President swung into an outline of the Administration's plans for cash relief in the drought area at once, referring to his inked notes at intervals, and catching answers to technical questions over his shoulders from the administrators who flanked him.

Earlier, the drought committee of the Agriculture Department had named 97 "emergency counties" in North and South Dakota, Montana and Wyoming, where Federal relief operations will center.

The President exhibited charts of the drought areas, blacked in over great portions of the Midwest to indicate sunburned regions where crops have been killed and where no rains have fallen. Although emphasizing that the drought was widespread, the President said concentrated relief activities are to begin only in completely impoverished areas.

50,000 Families to Get Aid.

Besides the 50,000 farmers who will go to work on WPA projects, he said, 50,000 families will receive the subsistence loans and grants in addition to 70,000 now receiving them through the RA. This totaled 170,000 families to be provided for out of the 204,000 considered to be emergency cases.

The President said this was too serious to get mixed up with politics, referring to the drought, which he called a long-range disaster in contrast with floods, earthquakes and tornadoes, which are immediate.

The President said he would not make any political speeches on his trip, but in answer to a question, indicated laughingly that he might make an "historical" speech in the Dakotas on the occasion of their seventy-fifth diamond jubilee as an organized Territory. He said that besides the Dakotas he might traverse parts of Minnesota on his mid-August trip.

Drought Deaths at 70

months, grain prices shot up to new high-price records for the season, in some cases to maximum limits permitted for one day, and then the gains were wiped out.

The break, coming shortly before the close, precipitated tumultuous trading as thousands of individuals dumped holdings on the market to realize handsome profits on the steep upturn under way during the several weeks' drought-inspired "bull" market.

Before crowded galleries, tan-coated traders worked themselves into a frenzy of excitement as they shouted and gesticulated across the pits, frantically executing the orders telegraphed into the huge market from all parts of the world. Similar scenes were enacted in the wheat pits of other major markets in the country.

News concerning reports of rains in Saskatchewan Province, Canada, in the heart of the great Dominion wheat belt, which was threatened by the drought, loosened the wave of selling in wheat futures. When the liquidation got under way in the wheat pit, weighing prices down gradually, it caught fire in the other grain pits and all prices reacted from early high levels. Other markets also lost ground.

The selling got under way with wheat at its apex—around $1.10 a bushel. Suddenly in a pit, which yesterday was devoid of sellers because no one wanted to let go at the maximum prices that could be bid, offers appeared as if by magic. The twisting fingers of "selling" brokers shot into the air and the cries of buyers answered. The wave of profit taking was on.

Wheat prices were beaten back to a level ranging from fractions to almost a cent below yesterday's close. When the final gong sounded July sold at 1.05⅝-1.05¾, compared with the high of 1.10⅜. It had touched a low of 1.04⅞.

Skillful Leadership.

At Topeka the Legislature has been called into extraordinary session to consider an amendment to the State constitution which would enable Kansas to participate fully in the Federal social security program. The design is to have the issue settled in November, since amendments to the Kansas constitution may only be submitted at general elections and require three months' advance advertisement.

The State is already participating in several of the minor undertakings of the social security program, in which no question of legality arises. Doubt developed, however, over the issue of Federal assistance in providing for the aged. At first, it was thought that local poor-relief statutes could be adapted to the requirements laid down by the national act. But the Kansas constitution was held to make that attempt impossible.

The Federal social security act demands that, in States seeking to join in the old-age pensions program, the plans should apply to all political subdivisions of a State and be compulsory. But Kansas has an explicit provision in its constitution delegating responsibility for the aged to the counties. Moreover, the Federal act requires that a single State agency be established to administer the program, which also seemed to call for constitutional amendment.

In his message to the Legislature yesterday, calling for action "necessary to enable this State to provide for what we generally call social security," Gov. Landon seemingly accomplished two ends.

He clearly showed that he does not regard constitutional prescriptions as fetters which should of necessity continue to bind a community struggling with new social problems. And he also emphasized the great importance of making any amendment to the organic law of the State "merely a grant of power" for a clearly specified end, leaving the methods of administration to be worked out later.

In so doing he very neatly placed Kansas among those States which freely acknowledge full local responsibility for assistance to the underprivileged, while leaving it to the future to determine whether the Federal act now on the statute book, or one based on the "pay-as-you-go" principle advocated in the Republican platform, should be employed as the national model.

The Outlook For Cuba.

Is Cuba, after nearly a decade of turmoil, at last headed for a period of economic improvement and political stability?

Americans would like to believe that this is now the case. They welcomed the Cuban-American reciprocal trade pact which benefited us and helped bring Cuba out of its economic slough of despond. They applauded the abrogation of the Platt amendment. They were pleased to learn of the peaceful accession to the Presidency of Dr. Miguel Mariano Gomez, formerly Mayor of Havana. But certain trends and tendencies in the island republic have been viewed here with alarm.

When the last Cuban budget was made public, for instance, there was much adverse comment in this country regarding the disproportionate amount expended for the maintenance of the army. The belief is still widespread that, whoever happens to sit in the presidential chair at Havana, the real ruler is Col. Batista backed by an army that is far greater than Cuba needs. And the ugly rumors that have, from time to time, emanated from Cuba regarding the persistence of a militarist reign of terror against all opponents of the army-supported regime have left a very bad impression on Americans.

However, Dr. Gomez in his inaugural address of last May indicated that his greatest desire is to bring about the restoration of normal life in his nation. He has emphasized this aim anew in an interview he recently gave to Mr. Russell B. Porter of the New York Times.

As he sees the situation the outlook for Cuba is far happier than has been the case in many years. The economic situation, while still far from good, is improving. The last budget, he avers, had to be rushed through because so little time was available between the establishment of the new government and the beginning of a new fiscal year. But the plans now are to balance expenditures and receipts without overlooking payments on foreign obligations now in default.

Most important of all, Dr. Gomez again promises a general amnesty for all political prisoners and freedom for all opposition groups provided they abandon their revolutionary aims. He wants Dr. Ramon Grau San Martin, head of the Cuban Revolutionary Party; Dr. Julio Martinez Saenz and other exiles to return and participate in the elections to be held this fall for the purpose of choosing delegates to a constituent assembly. He denies any dictatorial ambitions either for himself or for Col. Batista; and while he opposes too drastic economic reforms at this time, he declares himself willing to favor changes, particularly with regard to the land question.

It is to be hoped that Dr. Gomez' optimism is justified. Certainly nothing would help more in restoring normal political life than permitting opposition parties to exist and in curbing the power of the military. If Dr. Gomez is strong enough to do that he will deserve well of his nation.

Were Gompers Alive.

In his very interesting autobiography, well worth reading now that the clouds of industrial strife hang heavily over the steel industry, Samuel Gompers outlines as follows the reasons which impelled him to devote his life to the furtherance of trade-union organization:

> It was revolting to me that human beings should be used without regard to their needs or their aspirations as individuals. . . . As the control built up by holders of capital rested upon strategic economic advantage, I saw no reason why it was not just as practical for employes to mobilize and control their economic power as a countermove. The force of such economic organization would interpose a protecting barrier against arbitrary employers who fail to understand that those who supply human labor for industries are human beings.

John L. Lewis is a more aggressive and impassioned labor leader than was Samuel Gompers. The difference is in part one of temperament but also probably due to the fact that Gompers' work as an organizer stopped short at the great mass production industries. There resistance to unionization is strongest and there Lewis has for many years been fighting to extend the power of organized labor against opposition which has often been both determined and ruthless.

But for all the differences between the two men, their attitude toward the subject of unionization is fundamentally the same. This Mr. Lewis demonstrated when in his radio speech on Monday night he defined the impending struggle in the steel industry as:

> . . . an issue between an industry clearly organized on its management side, and the 500,000 men upon whose toil the whole structure depends. The question is whether these men shall have freedom of organization for the purpose of protecting their interest in this colossal economic organism.

Mr. Lewis is practically certain of popular support as long as he keeps to this issue. The Republican Party has already pledged itself to "protect the right of labor to organize and to bargain collectively through representatives of its own choosing without interference from any source." The Democratic platform, although more evasive in its wording on this subject, can certainly not be regarded as hostile to unionization. There is, indeed, very widespread antagonism to the feudal attitude of those steel masters who regard membership in an independent union as cause for the dismissal of an employe. Public authorities who treat men so discharged as eligible for relief will unquestionably be sustained by the force of public opinion in their communities.

On the other hand, it is precisely because the case of the Committee for Industrial Organization is so strong on the issue of independent unionism that Mr. Lewis is in danger of overplaying his hand. In his speech on Monday night he promised that "the public will be continuously informed" on the progress of the organization drive in the steel industry. The chairman of the C. I. O. will have to observe both the letter and the spirit of this pledge if he wishes to maintain the large measure of public support he has enlisted.

For there is good reason to suspect that Mr. Lewis is not being altogether frank with the public on whose reaction, in the last analysis, the independent unionization of the steel mills will depend.

There is evidence that he is inclined to make a political bargain with the Administration, swinging votes to the President in return for governmental support in this controversy. There is evidence that his objective is not so much to break down a ruthless labor policy on the part of the steel companies as it is to build up a ruthless labor policy on the part of the C. I. O. And the public fully realizes that when the Iron and Steel Institute condemns the tyranny of the "closed shop" its position is as strong as it is weak in asserting that the present system of company unionism is idyllic.

It is not merely those whom Mr. Lewis calls the "overlords of steel" who menace that individual freedom to which every human being has the right to aspire. Shrewd old Samuel Gompers knew very well that other overlords could be just as ruthless. Were he alive to speak on the current issue he would probably, to quote his own words, "tell the politicians to keep their hands off and thus preserve voluntary institutions and opportunity for individual and group initiative." And he would furthermore have been keenly aware of the fact that the omnipotent labor union can be quite as arbitrary and overbearing as the omnipotent capitalist.

So Mr. Lewis, in the very important struggle which is now joined, has need of all the generalship at his command. He asserts that his committee "in organizing the steel workers is animated by no selfish motives." The assertion is noted. Judgment as to its sincerity should properly be reserved. The first test will come with the decision of the A. F. of L. executive council on whether or not organized trade-union labor itself should support the industrial unionism sponsored by the C. I. O.

Japan Disowns The Ronin.

Only recently a Japanese colonel was executed for the murder last August of Lieut. Gen. Nagata, director of the military affairs bureau in the Tokyo war office. Now a high military court, presided over by the minister of war, has condemned to death 17 of the ringleaders in last February's military uprising in the Japanese capital, when three prominent government officials were assassinated.

These developments represent a radical, indeed almost a revolutionary, change in the official Japanese attitude toward patriotic assassins. In the past such malefactors have been upheld by the jingo press, by a large section of Japanese public opinion and even by the courts as heroes rather than murderers. They have been lauded as worthy successors to the famed 47 Ronin who, two centuries ago, tracked down and decapitated the enemy of their dead lord.

Thus it was that capital punishment was not imposed on the confessed slayers of Premier Inukai, Baron Dan of the House of Mitsui, Yunnosuke Inouye and other Japanese leaders done to death by jingoist gunmen in recent years. The feudal tradition remained stronger than the western conception of even-handed justice.

But the events of last February at last opened the eyes of the Japanese authorities to the very grave dangers to national stability involved in making heroes of assassins and letting them off with light sentences. They have now taken the bull by the horns and in defiance of the jingoes have decided to make an example of the February assassins. Nor is it the least significant aspect of the recent court-martial proceedings that one of the charges upon which the men were convicted was that their act constituted disobedience to the commands of the Emperor.

Henceforth, it is plain, modern Ronin will no longer be able to seek shelter behind the cloak of patriotism and perform their bloody deeds in the name of the descendant of the sun goddess. Murder in Japan will now be regarded as murder, however noble or high-minded the pretext. And removal of the danger of assassination should encourage Japanese statesmen gradually to reassert the authority which military gangsters have taken from them.

New Use For The Bonus.

It was during the kiss-and-hiss era, in which nothing mattered but a happy ending and the downfall of the villain, that matinee idols were born. Stage-door queues were to them what box-office appeal is now to the Colmans and the Gables. The reign of the Talleges, the Drews and the Bennetts depended not so much on drawing good houses as on attracting sidewalk crowds after the show. But the flower-strewn third dimension is not found in motion pictures. Personal contact has been eliminated by the medium of the silver screen.

Yet if star-gazing has become more synthetic, the fervor which occasions it is as real as ever. Recently 15-year-old Martha Vichnes, of Brooklyn, dramatically revived the glamour of the day when women attempted an invasion of the footlights. Taking $400 of her father's soldier's bonus, she flew to Hollywood to see Clark Gable. Lochinvar, jogging out of the West today, would be astonished to find his feminine counterpart reversing the old order so comprehensively.

While Martha Vichnes didn't get to see her idol, that does not detract from Mr. Gable's glorious magnetism, or Martha's sweet surrender to its trans-continental pull. May her flight impart to the movies some of the romance which once gilded the traditions of the stage! Women used to swoon at the drop of John Drew's silk hat. But Clark Gable only has to don a beret and they go up in the air, sustained in the ecstatic empyrean by father's bonus.

Vital Questions.

From the St. Louis Post Dispatch.

"How high is the Bunker Hill Monument? How many stars on a quarter? How long does a Representative sit? If the law isn't signed, may it be a good law?"

The foregoing questions are not extracts from the latest parlor game, nor are they parts of an examination for a Ph. D. degree. They are—believe it or not—questions asked of applicants for citizenship by naturalization examiners, as compiled by officials at Washington. Asking them is supposed to fulfill the requirement of the Federal law that applicants show their knowledge of the Constitution's provision and acquaintance with American forms of government.

It is an interesting exhibit of the bureaucratic mind. Suppose an applicant answered every one of the trick queries correctly, what would be proved? And if he didn't, why should he be disqualified for citizenship, or for anything else?

This sort of nonsense has been going on for years. The practice has now been stopped, however, by order of Col. Daniel W. McCormack, commissioner of immigration and naturalization. "Questions put to applicants in the future must be frank, clear and expressed in simple language," he directs, "involving no 'catch' or 'trick'."

Chalk up a victory for common sense?

The Zioncheck Affair.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your fair and considerate editorial concerning Mr. Zioncheck, which appeared in the July 1 issue, under the title "Sensible Conclusion" deserves praise and commendation.

You recognized and justly appraised the humane manner in which Mr. Kenneth Romney, the Sergeant at Arms of the House, acted in this case. In giving credit where credit belongs, you serve the public interest in a manner worthy of a large metropolitan newspaper.

I do not wish to condone any of Congressman Zioncheck's antics, but cannot understand why high-salaried public officials in the District of Columbia decided to force the arrest of an unhappy Representative who needed sympathetic understanding more than physical and mental persecution.

We can be thankful to the Lord that in the administration of justice, there are still some Christian gentlemen left whose judgment is guided and controlled under justifiable circumstances by the dictates of the heart rather than the strict Draconian interpretation of the law.

The Fourth Celebrations.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why celebrate victory over a nation now on friendly terms with ourselves? Why celebrate victory in a war brought on by George III, who knew not whither to turn for funds to carry on his extravagances, and so, by tyrannizing the colonists, plunged the two countries into war?

These continual celebrations must engender hatred in the rising generation. Furthermore, in years to come, this yearly frenzy will have caused more deaths from celebrating with fireworks than the actual war with England!

The Supreme Court's Duty.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In view of the issues raised by both the Republicans and Democrats concerning the Supreme Court, the people of the United States must signify their approval or disapproval of the present method of deciding the constitutionality of laws.

Many attempt to show that the issue lies in whether or not 5-to-4 decisions should stand. To change this to a two-thirds majority would only postpone the real remedy. For the trouble is imbedded not in the manner of voting but in the indefiniteness of the judicial body's specific duties. There are two viewpoints concerning this. One held by the majority of the people is that the work of the court is only to decide the legality of any law. The other group believes that elements of social and economic welfare are factors to be considered when decisions are rendered.

No one can challenge the comprehensiveness of thought and intelligence shown by the minority justices, when they attempt to place the legality of the law as a secondary figure. However, in the interest of democracy and government by the people, the duty of the court is to decide whether the rulings conform to the Constitution.

If there were a court that would decide upon the economic and social issues it would transform the power of making laws by the consent of the people to that of the court.

A View Of The November Issue.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I intrude again in your columns to answer the epistle of A. S. E. Ely in your issue of June 29, in response to my letter of the 26th?

Never before have I heard anyone challenge, much less deny as "Comrade" Ely does, the fact that wages, both real and apparent, are from 4 to 44 times higher in the United States than any other country of this or any other time. If "Comrade" Ely would only visit other lands and particularly Soviet Russia, or would merely read the comparative statistical studies of wages and working conditions in all countries, he might be convinced of the fact that wages are far higher and working conditions far better in the U. S. than in any country on earth. That is the reason why the people of all other countries want to migrate to America. This is the only country with any considerable immigration or any considerable foreign population—the last census revealing over 14,000,000 foreign-born and over 40,000,000 "foreign stock" persons.

Equally questionable is "Comrade" Ely's other main assertion that no one in America can "honestly" earn decent wages under our traditional competitive, economic system and the religious belief of our fathers and mothers. The idea is preposterous that men can get higher returns for brain or brawn effort in Russia where there is not even the freedom to worship the God of one's fathers. Unfairness, favoritism, nepotism and the like are inherent in any dictator and must result in dishonesty, and a continual effort to "beat the game" on the part of any dictator's subjects.

As a result of our American system, although we have less than one-fifteenth of the world's population, we have about two-thirds of all the telephones, radios, automobiles, flying machines and every other labor-saving and pleasure spreading device. What I cannot appreciate is why all these Communists, Socialists, pinks, reds, radicals and the rest of those foreign-born and native-born "New Dealers" want to stay in America when they could go to Russia or Ethiopia or some other land of their Fascist, Communist, Socialist dreams. Leave us and ours in peace and prosperity—prosperity except when we are infected and afflicted with a world-wide depression epidemic, caused by the alien nostrums and political dynasties of Europe.

With reference to "the dynasty of economic royalists" that "Comrade" Ely mentioned by name, like Mellon, Rockefeller, Ford, Macfadden, Insull and others, may I suggest that every one of the above Americans started at the foot of the economic and financial ladder. John D. Rockefeller started in a country store selling coal oil, as a clerk, at less than a dollar a day. Henry Ford started as a poor inventive mechanic and today furnishes, dirt cheap, a car for spreading happiness and pleasure to the multitudes. The same is true of 90 per cent of all the other big business men at the head of industry, finance, commerce and transportation. Charlie Clements, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, started as a rod bearer; Dan Willard, president of the B. & O., started as a track walker and so it goes.

The truth is that in no other land has a poor penniless lad the opportunity or chance to rise and to reap in return for hard work, industry and honest effort the good things of life. Personally, I cannot believe that fathers and mothers will want to vote to keep in power enemies of the economical and political and religious beliefs of our fathers which have made us great economically, financially, commercially, socially, morally and religiously. These give their sons an unrivaled opportunity to rise in the world.

It seems to me that is the issue next November.

The Company Unions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The American people should examine with a critical eye the motives back of the impending strike in the steel industry. Communism is ever ready to shout about the downtrodden laboring man as a means of gaining public sympathy.

Communists care only for the weakening of our Government to the point where as the result of social disorders they can step in and take over the reins of government. Neither Socialists nor New Dealers have yet found the way to make two and two equal more than four, and to permit irresponsible labor agitators to dictate to business management spells the beginning of the end for American industry.

Where company unions are working in peace and harmony with their employers, there is no good reason for permitting outside agitators to come in and upset those peaceful relations. Public sentiment will play an important part in the coming strike and common sense and not maudlin sympathy should dictate our course.

League And Constitution.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It must be hell for an emperor to have to sit on the steps of the League of Nations and beg for justice. But Haile Selassie, no doubt, has found out by this time that the League of Nations is nothing more than a jackpot where the winner takes all. Haile Selassie's case puts me in mind of the NRA, where the little fellow got it in the neck.

Talk about the Dark Ages! If they were any worse than what we have been experiencing during this depression, it must have been the next thing to Hades. Justice—who knows the meaning of the word nowadays! It is as far removed from our civilization as the Antarctic Pole. We poor devils, 45 years of age or over, can sympathize with Haile Selassie. He has been handed the same kind of justice by the League of Nations that we have been receiving under the Constitution of the United States.

We have a long way to go before we crawl out of the Dark Ages ourselves, for social justice is unknown in the twentieth century. But there is one thing to our credit—we had brains enough to stay out of the League of Nations.

The Pope's Encyclical.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The papal encyclical enjoining the clergy to obtain pledges from their communicants that they abstain from attending theaters where "bad films" are shown has served to call attention to conditions that have existed in the film industry for some time. There has been a steady decline in the moral and esthetic content of many screen productions since the synchronization of vision and sound.

Pius XI, in exhorting his bishops throughout the world to combat the debasing influence of objectionable motion pictures, is using the prerogative of a wise and alert spiritual leader.

Educated people everywhere, regardless of creed, do not need to resort to a pledge in order not to patronize theaters exhibiting films that offend the canons of good taste or one's artistic sensibilities. It is not so difficult to stay away from such theaters, and practicing this good habit on a national scale might have a salutary effect.

The Post Impressionist

Peace—And Quiet.

Post Office, Wednesday.

WHAT does love of noise indicate?

Barbarism?

Or the reverse—super-civilization?

Children are noisy. Any psychologist will tell you that noise is inalienable from their age and ignorance.

But did you go to the Cleveland convention? Or did you go to the convention in Philadelphia?

This columnist used to think Spain was the noisiest country in the world—or, at all events, that Barcelona, which insists on being called Catalonian, was the noisiest city.

You'd arrive there, say, at 8:30 p. m., worn out by your journey—because, wherever you come from, it's a long, long way to Barcelona. And you'd pick out, to retire to, a retiring little hostelry on a lovely thoroughfare, which you were told was one of the town's ramblas. It had a pavement on each side, like most streets, and two footways down its shaded center, like most boulevards.

Still, you couldn't think why it was called a rambla. It held no ramblers.

It was, indeed, deserted.

So, by bribery and cajolery—chiefly cajolery—you managed to get what was an early dinner, for Barcelona, and went to bed in a cool, whitewashed room overlooking that rambla.

Then, promptly at 10 o'clock, you were awakened by voices. By a multitude of voices. By a multitude rambling through the rambla. And you didn't get to sleep again for 8 hours.

Men, women and children—767,984; count 'em—the entire population of Barcelona, plus the sailors on shore leave from the ships and the soldiers on town leave from the forts, meandered up and down the rambla and talked at the top of their 767,984 voices, the babes in arms being carried and shouting their share.

The thing went right on until 6 a. m.

Yet what about Paris?

You'd have passed an eve[illegible] in Montmartre—of course in the artist section of Montmartre, discussing learnedly the new fashions in painting, the latest school of sculpture, the most recent tendencies in verse. Something like that. Anyhow, you'd no sooner got to bed than you were screamed out of it by the most hideous combination of hullabaloo and screechings ever precisely calculated to add the ultimate agony to a high-priced early morning headache.

Every day—Sundays included. Doubly unendurable, Sundays.

Moreover, this Paris pandemonium was official. It was governmental. It was the wagons and trucks of the federal post-and-telegraph service.

There remained, we used to think, only Rome—only the Eternal City. How, in such a continuous carnival of noise, it did remain—how it could be even a temporary city, let alone an eternal city—was always beyond our hardest imagining.

The worst of the thing began when the Roman citizenry discovered the automobile—or, more properly, the automobile horn and the infinite possibilities of unadjusted brakes—and started driving this machinery through streets that weren't made for motors and that furnished excellent excuses for horn-honking and brake-breaking every 10 or 12 yards of their course.

Nevertheless, this was merely an ancient national passion taking the fullest advantage of a modern invention. A friend of ours long resident in Rome used truly to say:

"The Italians like noise. They prefer melodious noise; but, failing that, they'll insist on the noise without the melody."

Noisy Barcelona—yet Barcelona is adventure.

Noisy Paris—yet Paris is art.

Noisy Rome—yet Rome is the bequest of the Caesars.

Perhaps there is, in the noise of Washington, more than meets the ear.

LETTER AND ANSWER.

Dear Post-Impressionist: I am ambitious to write fiction. I have written to a certain magazine asking its rules for stories, and they have replied just saying their rules are to write with "a typewriter and on one side of the paper only." This seems kind of indefinite. What would you advise?

NOVICE.

Dear Novice: It is more than kind of indefinite; it is suspiciously indefinite, and we advise you to leave the magazine in question severely alone. You can not trust your productions to an editor who is so vague that he tells you to "write on one side of the paper only"—and then does not tell you which side.

THE POST-IMPRESSIONIST.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

The Geneva Press.

The press coop of the League of Nations in Geneva produced two interesting incidents last week. One day the Italian journalists appeared with mechanical raspberries and blew a blast of insulting noises at Haile Selassie, the foul aggressor who was defeated last winter in his unprovoked assault of the very gates of Rome. Saturday Arthur Karl Greiser, the Danzig Nazi leader, thumbed his nose at the journalism of the world, causing great indignation.

Considering the conduct of the Italians and the general quality of the journalism of the world at Geneva, there is much to be said against Herr Greiser's gesture. The Americans and the British and, one presumes, the Scandinavians are respectable enough, but they are only a minority, and minorities do not rate much nowadays.

The journalism of the world at Geneva includes not only the Italians but the Germans, and Herr Greiser undoubtedly knows what German journalism is today. It also includes the French whose journalism is famous throughout the world for its corruptness. Then there are representatives of Balkan papers and publications in Russia and the Orient.

The majority of those at whom Herr Greiser thumbed his nose are propagandists, and even the statesmen who are sent in to plot with and against one another are in a position to look down on the fourth estate.

There are said to be some members of the profession in Geneva who are secretly employed by the ammunition companies, and it is common talk around the bar outside the press room that the diplomats bribe certain brothers in the craft to lean one way or another in their articles.

* * * *

It is impossible, of course, to bribe the Italians or Germans, because they have no voice in the selection or treatment of the material which they send out. The Italians and the Germans do as they are told. They have a distinct feeling of inferiority in the company of the free journalists, but for their defense they maintain an attitude of pride in their condition.

The same thing may be noticed in the demeanor of the fair defendants on "Ladies' Day" in certain American police courts following a general round-up of prostitutes on the streets. The ladies of the pavement develop an air of bravado and sometimes wink at the judge, and the Italians and Germans boast of their devotion to the lowest concept of journalism in the world.

It would be interesting to hear just what Mr. Dino Alfieri, the Italian minister of propaganda, expected to gain by organizing the outbreak of the Italian correspondents against Haile Selassie.

In Rome Mr. Alfieri is a great puzzle to the members of the American and British press. He is not very bright at best, and there are always rumors that Mussolini is going to fire him and even stick him away on some island. Yet he hangs on from week to week—a pompous, vain bureaucrat in a petty job, too, which in the American scheme of government would just about correspond to a keeper of the scrapbooks.

The foreign correspondents mimic him and laugh at him and delight to watch him grovel when Mussolini comes by.

* * * *

Dino's constant desire is to produce good publicity in the American papers, but his understanding is limited to Italian journalists, who have to do as he tells them, and he is always being disappointed in his clippings from the United States. He probably thought the Americans would be awed to read that his journalists in Geneva had gone into the meeting with tin whistles and clackers to heckle the deposed Emperor of Abyssinia.

Possibly he got the idea from reading about the mechanical cheers and the parade of the job-holders in the Democratic convention.

If you could see Dino saluting and cringing in the presence of the Duce you would not expect much from the body of journalists who in turn salute him and take their orders from him.

In our contempt for Dino Alfieri's demonstration from the press coop there is a feeling of satisfaction, too, for the American press. The more the journalists of the rest of the world reveal themselves the better we look.

Stock Speculation Necessary, Virginia U. Institute Is Told

Charles Gay, N. Y. Exchange Head, Admits Abuses, However, in Speech Before Public Affairs Forum at School.

By Felix Bruner.

A Staff Correspondent.

Charlottesville, Va., July 7.—Speculation in securities was defended as an economic necessity by speakers before the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia here today.

The second day's program of the institute continued to follow broadly the subjects of current problems of business and finance, and of foreign affairs. Speakers on the latter subject urged that America take its place among the nations in facing the problems of the world.

Charles R. Gay, president of the New York Stock Exchange, following an explanation of the mechanics of the exchange, said:

"Should events produce any impairment of present, highly geared, and smooth-working market equipment and practices, I am certain that not much time would pass before the public made its dissatisfaction felt in positive ways. The users of market facilities, whether they be investors or speculators, are looking to those of us who have the responsibility of stock exchange management for continued vigilance against any impairment of service and of other vital elements which affect investments in securities and the opportunity to exercise free judgment.

Shared By All.

"This impression, I am sure, is shared by everyone who carries any degree of responsibility toward the maintenance of free markets. I feel that I may speak for the New York Stock Exchange in this connection and by reason of events of the last 18 months, I am sure that the Securities and Exchange Commission realizes its responsibilities in this respect."

Gay said he freely admitted that the facilities of the exchange had at times in the past been misused by selfish persons, but he declared the management of the exchange "intends to exert every effort to so control utilization of our market facilities that avoidable abuses will be prevented."

"Continuity of Governmental policy would be the most effective mean of eliminating speculative excesses, while retaining the benefits inherent in broad and flexible capital markets," he said.

Admitting, as did Gay, that there have been abuses, Cumberland declared that " there is no more logic in basing permanent policy on the abnormalities of 1928 and 1929 than of formulating British policy on the theory that the Black Death of about the year 1350 is a normal and recurrent phenomenon."

Lists Changes.

"As between the defects in our economic system which may be traced to speculative excesses on one hand or lack of capital markets on the other, there can be no question that the former should be chosen," he added.

Cumberland listed changing corporate earnings, changing levels of commodity prices and changing values of currencies as the most important factors in governing the extent and direction of speculation.

"But what," he asked, "is largely responsible for thes basic changes? The answer is government. Policies of government in regards to tariffs, transportation, banking, industrial organization, labor and agriculture determine basic conditions which are encountered by corporations and create the conditions which result in profits or losses for business. In comparison with such powerful forces, the influence on speculators is puny and futile.

"Were it not for the necessity of industry to adjust itself to sweeping economic changes, for which governments are principally responsible, the field of speculation would be comparatively narrow. Hence speculation cannot fairly be taken to task for translating into the economic and financial structure these effects which flow from Governmental policy."

Cites Punishment.

After defending speculation as a necessity in maintaining a free and open market for securities, Charles H. Meyer, New York author and lawyer, told the institute:

"The economic harm caused by injudicious speculation is not cured but aggravated by the financial punishment of the speculator. There is no difference in principle between the detriment caused by losses in security speculation and those caused by failures in other forms of commerce or industry."

Meyer said that enactment of the securities exchange act had materially limited speculation of an unwise and uninformed character and has increased the benefits of speculation in our national economy.

"The statute as it has been administered to date, although it undoubtedly has limited the volume of transactions on exchanges, does not appear to have restricted their operation to a point where their function of eliminating economic friction has been seriously impaired," he said. "However, should speculation by exchange members be prohibited, the usefulness of the market might be greatly jeopardized.

Professional Speculators.

"If judicious speculation is economically beneficial and injudicious speculation economically harmful it would be better to leave speculation in the hands of professionals rather than to entrust it to the amateur public. This is particularly so because losses by the professional, whose financial resources are usually substantial, result in less social disturbance than losses by the amateur."

Speculation itself, he said, can never be abolished so long as there is private property.

"As long as there is private property," he said, "there will be effort to increase it by taking advantage of changing conditions. That, in a broader sense, is what we call speculation."

In the round table discussion on international goodwill, sponsored by the Rotary Clubs of Virginia, Frederic R. Coudert, New York lawyer and foreign affairs expert, told the audience that the determination of the United States to avoid, at any cost, being drawn into another war "explains the almost morbid desire to refrain from such innocuous international co-operation as mere adherence to the World Court."

The Italo-Ethiopian situation, he said, has demonstrated the impossibility in the present state of world development, of successfully working a policy of co-operation and collective sanctions.

Good Neighbor Policy.

"The United States," he said, "will go no further than to use pleasant phrases about peace, offer mediation treaties and deplore acts of violence. It will not seek to prevent them, whatever treaty obligations may be inferable from the Kellogg pact, the nine-power treaty, or any other treaty. A mere good neighbor policy is all the United States will pursue, and this fact might as well be frankly and fully reckoned with."

Referring again to the breakdown of the collective security system, Coudert said.

"If the League is to continue, it must therefore undergo a very radical revision. It is devoutly to be hoped that it may continue to exist as a method of diplomacy and a clearing house for international affairs. Had it existed in 1914 it is quite probable that the World War might have been averted or at least postponed."

It remains to be considered, Coudert said, whether we can now by statute lessen the danger of being drawn into any general war that may in the future take place.

"We have done all we can at the present time by statute to avoid some of the controversies engendered during the last war," he said. "To go further would be quite useless and would not solve any of the real problems. It is unthinkable that the United States would abandon all commerce and all transactions abroad, however legal or proper, during a war. While belligerent operations exist upon the high seas, there is always the possibility that the American flag might suffer injustice.

"Neutrality Illusion."

"The idea of a foolproof neutrality is the merest illusion and the only real question is how far we will insist upon the rights of American ships to sail upon the high seas and American goods of all kinds to go to neutrals.

"Contraband trade is unlawful under the recognized rules of the law of nations, although it is not penalized by domestic law. By allowing the trader to trade at his own risk we can avoid some of the dangerous controversies. Beyond this I do not think we can go, and in the next war, as in the past wars the United States will have to be governed by the public opinion of its people as to what attitude it will take."

P. H. W. Almy, an English barrister, told the institute that it is impossible for the United States to hold aloof from world affairs. "You are no longer economically isolated," he said. "Economically you need the rest of the world as the rest of the world needs you. There is no such thing as moral isolation. There is, on the other hand, a moral obligation on you to play your part in world affairs.

"The freedom of the seas upon which your trade is carried on is a vital American interest. Is not the freedom of lands with which that trade is carried on equally vital to you. Can you tolerate the paralysis of your exchanges and the debasement of your securities. Can you witness unconcented the destruction of your markets. Someone has said that your financiers had put an end to neutrality long before the war started. Literally the whole world is bound by gold chains, not in the sense in which Tennyson used the words, but in the sense in which Wall Street understands them. If the case is stated in the terms of finance, neutrality is impossible."

Almy declared that the American policy of isolation has caused this country to suffer "worse than any" from the economic crisis.

"In this," he said, "I find the chief condemnation of your policy of neutrality."

"Neutrality," he added, "may keep you out of the fighting lines, but it will not keep you out of the bankruptcy court. You may save your lives, you will not save your souls; certainly you will not save your investments and your bank balance."

"A great people cannot survive upon a small policy."

Dr. Frank O. Darvall, British lecturer and member of the Royal Institute of International Affairs, suggested the eventual possibility of an understanding between Europe as a whole and America as a whole.

"If Europe understood America," he said, "and came to her only in honesty, with proposals which were honestly in America's as well as in Europe's interest, it would not come, as it usually does come, as a divided continent, with sectional proposals.

"In my opinion it is to America's interest to assist Europe as a whole to eliminate prospect of war and to attain, by reason of close economic co-operation, greater prosperity. But it is notto America's interest, and if it were it would be contrarty to America's traditions, to take sides in Europe and help one section, politically or economically, against the other."

Included also on today's institute program were the following talks: "The March of Democracy; Will It Halt?" by the Rev. Henry Smith Leiper, of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America; "Electrical Public Utilities in Mexico," by Ernest Galarza, of the Yearlong School, Long Island; "Present Economic Trends in Mexico," by John B. Glenn, president of the Mexican Chamber of Commerce; "County Manager Plan in Operation," by H. Saiden, manager of Albemarle County, Va., and "The County Manager Plan," by Willard F. Day, county manager of Henrico County, Va.

Rail Pensions Ruling Leaves Pay Dilemma

Tax Voided, Board Doubtful on Disbursing Retirement Cash.

By the Associated Press.

Although the Government won what its attorneys viewed as a partial victory in a recent court test of the 1935 railroad pension legislation, the decision has snarled plans for disbursement of the benefits and put a major policy question up to the Railroad Retirement Board.

Judge Jennings Bailey, of the United States District Court, ruled void an act levying taxes for the pensions, but did not hold unconstitutional a companion act providing for their payment.

Officials said yesterday that Congress appropriated $46,000,000,000 for pensions and attorneys expressed the opinion the court ruling would not bar use of this fund for benefit disbursements.

Board Studies Course.

Designed to cover the first year of the pension system's operation, the appropriation was made out of general funds on the assumption the Treasury would be reimbursed from levies imposed under the tax act.

The Pension Board is studying its course of action, but Chairman Murray W. Latimer said no decision had been reached.

Some officials contended that if the board should proceed to disburse benefits and the Supreme Court knocked down the whole pension system, the retirement payments would be abruptly cut off, reacting to the detriment of aged employes who gave up their jobs to accept pensions and leaving the Government in the hole for any amount paid out.

The high court originally ruled out the 1934 rail retirement act and the new legislation was designed to circumvent this decsiion.

Could Avoid Question.

It would be possible, officials said, for the retirement board merely to certify to the Treasury that pensions were payable to designated individuals, thus passing the tangled question of disbursement to that department. They added, however, that the Treasury probably would be consulted on any decision reached by the board.

Pensions were schceduled to begin July 1 for employes who were 65 years old or who had been in service for 30 years. Based on length of service and earnings and ranging upward to a maximum of $120 monthly, the pensions would average around $75 a month.

Neither the Government nor the class 1 railroads which challenged validity of the new retirement legislation have yet appealed from Judge Bailey's decision, but such action is expected.

New York Reduces Deficit $41,171,323

Albany, N. Y., July 7 (AP).—Gov. Lehman today reported the New York State government collected $330,543,774.53 in taxes during the fiscal year ending June 30—or $41,171,323.63 more than it spent in the same period.

This reduced the accumulated deficit to $55,877,428, mainly through "emergency taxes," the first of which was imposed in 1935.

Never before, the Governor said, has the State financial balance mounted as far in the black in a single year as it did last year. The nearest approach was in 1929, when the surplus for the year was $29,700,000.

The Japanese Muddle Through

Tokyo Expert Finds No Single View On China Policy.

By Frank H. Hedges.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Tokyo.

THERE IS probably not a single magazine or newspaper editor or writer on current affairs among the Japanese who has not lifted his voice through the written word during the past few months for a unified, stabilized China policy to which Japan can adhere for at least the next few years, preferably the next few decades and, if possible, several generations.

This cry is going up in vain so far, despite the fact there are a dozen or so American and European commentators on the Far Eastern scene to be found here, in China and in their homelands who can tell one exactly what Japan's China policy is and what methods this empire is following and will follow to implement it. It becomes difficult to accept their interpretation, however, when it is found that scarcely any two of them agree and a great variety of China policies are offered for choice.

The truth is that Japan does not know its own mind as regards China. It does not know just what it wants from that country, just what Sino-Japanese relations would be most beneficial to Japan, nor what methods to employ in enforcing that policy once it is decided upon. There are several schools of conflicting thought as regards China among the Japanese, but there is no unity. At times, one will be in the saddle and at other times another will truumph. As one method after another fails, still new means of enforcing Japan's wishes are sought. There is, in effect, tremendous confusion within Japan as to what the China policy should be.

Many Have Opinions, But All Are Different.

I HAVE JUST returned from two months spent in China and Manchukuo (a word which the Chinese censors invariably alter to the old form of Manchuria or else insert the words "puppet state" to precede it), where I have had talks, official and nonofficial, confidential and for written quotation, with both government and private persons of Chinese, Japanese, American, British, French, German, Red and White Russian nationality. It is a curious thing that almost invariably these men know exactly what Japan's China policy is and how Tokyo is setting about to accomplish it, to which I can only reply I wish they would inform the Japanese government in Tokyo of these concrete facts since I am convinced that it is in pretty much of a haze on the question itself.

In most general terms—but they are so general as to be almost meaningless—Japan knows what it wants as regards China. There is unanimity of Japanese opinion in that this nation desires a friendly neighbor which can in no way be considered an economic, political or military competitor, a nation which will regard Japan very much in the same light as the good student regards his teacher, a nation which accepts, indorses and co-operates in a Far Eastern scheme wherein Japan plays an unquestioned and dominant role. That is about as specific when it comes to concrete application as the indorsement of a "stable currency" or Mr. Roosevelt's "good neighbor" policy.

There are more specific China policies in Japan, each with its own advocates, among them being that of the extreme and militaristic nationalists (not all Japanese military leaders are agreed on a China policy by any means), which is the one usually meant by critics of Japan; the policy of the business men and industrial firms, which is among the haziest of all but which at least has the merit of putting economic considerations before militaristic; the policy of what might be termed the moderate military group; the policy of the theoretical idealists; the now discarded "Shidehara policy," and several others. At the moment the advocates of the first-mentioned policy seem to be in the saddle, but there are numerous signs that their grip is weakening, and it is weakening primarily because it is not achieving the success expected of and by them.

'Divide And Rule' Is Policy of Extremists.

THE GUIDING principle of this group is the ancient one of "Divide and Rule," to which is added the Asiatic corollary of "weaken the units even after they have been divided." Manchukuo has already been split off effectively from China, and they would not do the same with the five provinces north of the Yellow River. In this instance, however, they prefer to leave these five provinces nominally under Chinese sovereignty; actually a satrapy of Japan. The Central Government at Nanking would be left intact but would be reduced to a position of vassalage in which it would have to heed every Japanese whim and be so weak as to be unable not only to offer Japan no resistance but to be of no possible aid of any nature to any enemy of Japan. South China, apparently, would constitute a third autonomous state not unlike that planned for North China.

China would be rendered impotent not only from the military standpoint but likewise as a possible economic competitor for Japan. Only those industries complementary to Japanese industry instead of competitive would be permitted birth and growth. The agricultural and other natural wealth of China would be developed with the idea of feeding Japanese mills and factories with raw materials. The economic improvement of China would be fostered, but only that the Chinese masses might become a vast consuming market for Japanese products.

This is the most extreme and most passion-arousing of the group of China policies championed in Japan. The methods advocated are military pressure and outright armed force when necessary and, lately, smuggling to such a degree as to cripple the Nanking Government financially. It is a policy that is foredoomed to meet with failure sooner or later because basically it is not practical, but in the meantime it may have its fling at the expense of both China and Japan—and of other foreign interests, inciuding American, in China.

Moderates Seek Only A Subservient China.

THE MODERATE militarists would not go to these lengths at all. They, too, want to see a North China that is nominally autonomous but virtually independent of Nanking and that is most distinctly within Japan's sphere of absolute influence. They would have a Chinese at the head of North China of large enough caliber to command the respect of all Chinese, but one primarily pro-Japanese. Such a man is an impossibility because these two qualifications are incompatible. They desire this state of affairs because they believe it essential that North China be occupied as a Japanese military base in the event of a Russo-Japanese war so that the Soviet cannot outflank Japanese troops in Manchuria and Siberia. Incidentally, they are willing to take any economic gains that may accrue, but no militarist in Japan thinks from the economic viewpoint.

Businessmen and capitalists in Japan look at China primarily from this viewpoint. They fully realize that military methods so antagonize the Chinese people that they can sell goods to them only by force. They realize that North China offers a potential field for development such as cotton growing and coal mining that would be vastly profitable in Japanese hands. They realize that Chinese labor is cheaper than Japanese and, under Japanese management, is quite as efficient. They are willing to have North China split off from Nanking because they think that thus they can secure concessions and be given a free hand to go forward with economic development, but they have learned valuable lessons from the Manchurian experiment.

Manchukuo has not turned out to be the gold mine they had expected, and the socialistic views of the Japanese army are extremely anti-capitalist. They will not rush into North China as they did into Manchuria. In fact, Japanese capital is going into that land now only under compulsion. They are consequently, opposed to the use of armed force unless vital because it entagonizes their buying public and because of its tremendous cost and anti-capitalism, and they are violently opposed to smuggling by which all legitimate Japanese business interests in China suffer more greatly than those of any other nation.

None of these policies, as briefly sketched here, is what Japanese editors and writers mean when they raise the cry for a unified stabilized China policy which can be consistently followed for some years to come. None of them offers Japan exactly what it wants—a friendly disciple and meek follower, a producer of raw materials for Japan and a purchaser of Japanese manufactured products, a nation which can in no way be considered a menace or even a competitor.

China As Much In Dark As Rest Of World On Fate.

CHINA, TOO, is quite ignorant as to what the Japanese policy may be. The Nanking government has no idea what demands will be made upon it next or what methods utilized to enforce those demands. Japanese spokesmen quote the three principles of Premier Hirota to them and insist that China agree to them. Nanking retorts that these principles are so vague they could cover anything, and asks Tokyo to draw up its specific bill, following which the two governments can sit down and discuss it item by item. This Tokyo will not do, primarily because it does not yet know what the full bill that it intends to present to China may be, and perhaps because it fears it would be of such magnitude as to rouse the world as it was roused at the time of the Twenty-one Demands.

Although far from agreed as to policy, although far from certain as to exactly what is wanted of China, the two broad, general schools of thought in Japan—which may be loosely dubbed military and civilian for sake of convenience—are at one in believing that China's destiny must be so shaped as to fill and complete Japan's deficiencies. The civilian and the moderate militarists are agreed in another essential point: They want no second Kwangtung Army in China. The Kwangtung Army, as the Japanese troops in Manchukuo are known, is an independent unit in the field, quite as independent of Tokyo as of Nanking. Tokyo is going to do its best to see that no similar independent military unit arises in China proper.

The group in control of Japan's China policy at present—and that does not include all members of the Japanese government or even of the War Office by any means—seems to have lost all sense of Japan's limitations, but that does not, of course, mean that these limitations have disappeared. The course they advocate is an impossible one. Not Japan, not Great Britain, not the United States nor any other nation could accomplish what they hope to accomplish, and sooner or later they will bump into this reality. The crash will be a terrific one unless, as it to be hoped, the saner heads in Tokyo have gained control and altered this policy considerably.

Tokyo Seen Muddling Through To Decision.

JAPAN IS muddling through in the sense that no definite, conclusive and permanent China policy has yet been adopted, that Tokyo is still in a stage of experimentation as to what it wants in China and how best to get it.

The military view is uppermost at one moment; the moderate at another; the strictly economic at still a third. In the meantime, all of the apologists for Japan attempt to rationalize whatever may have just taken place no matter how inconsistent it may be with preceding events or with unblinkable facts. They have evolved a set of stock phrases, and have drugged themselves through the use of them, but many of those phrases do not carry the same connotation to the American and the Englishman as the Japanese have hypnotized themselves into believing, so that it might be well to list a few of the more important, together with the definition that they have to the Japanese mind:

"Sincerity:" By this Japan means that a nation is "insincere" unless it agrees with Japanese policy and wishes, unless it accepts the Japanese vewpoint.

"Co-operation:" To the Japanese this means: "You do as I tell you to do."

"Leadership:" The same meaning as attaches to the word "mastery" for those to whom English is a native tongue.

"For China's own good:" What Japan considers to be best for China, which, of course, is never harmful to Japan.

"Eastern Asia:" More than is embraced in the former term, the Far East; in fact, every inch of soil and water that Japan can possibly embrace within its sphere of influence.

Divorce Decree Won by Ringling

Sarasota, Fla., July 7 (AP).—John Ringling, the circus owner, won a final divorce decree today from his second wife, Mrs. Emily Haag Buck Ringling.

Circuit Judge W. T. Harrison's order said testimony given during the long series of hearings showed the 71-year-old man, last of the famous Ringling brothers, was critically ill and Mrs. Ringling repeatedly violated physicians' orders that her husband be kept quiet and free from worry.

The first Mrs. Ringling died some years ago. In 1933 Ringling brought divorce proceedings against his second wife, but wfthdrew them. He filed the present suit March 4, 1934.

He charged Mrs. Ringling with nagging him about financial matters, with having "an ungovernable temper," with refusing to allow him the medical care he needed to regain his health and with deliberately causing him pain and discomfort.

Sakel and Boys Provide Music For La Paree

New Maestro Takes Hold; Mary Nolan Stars at Cocoanut Grove.

By Chanticleer.

Al Sakel has picked up the baton at La Paree where Emory Daugherty dropped it a few days ago in favor of a tour. Maestro Sakel's unit is comprised of five men, with Buddy Shaner in the vocals.

As hinted some time ago, La Paree will continue to present floor shows through the summer. This week's fare is composed of Diane and Edwards, adagio experts; Buddy Mack, rhythm specialist, and Sylvia Harris, ballet dancer.

Teach Art of Makeup To Girls, Parents Told

Seattle, July 7 (AP).—Parents should employ experts to teach their daughters the art of makeup, and should place their children on a salary for chores done at home, Miss Mary Rokahr, Government economist, told the American Home Economics Association today.

Miss Rokahr said children should be made to keep business records and personal accounts of money received for home work.

The Federal Diary

By Betty Read.

With the idea of creating interest among Government employes holding technical and professional jobs in becoming affiliated directly with the American Federation of Labor, a technical group within the Bureau of Standards is sponsoring a series of lectures by outstanding scientists.

The second such lecture will be held at 4 p. m. tomorrow in the chemistry building of the Bureau, Connecticut avenue and Van Ness street. Dr. William J. Humphreys, formerly chief meteorological physicist of the U. S. Weather Bureau will give an illustrated talk on "The Fury of the Heavens." All Government departments in which there are professional or technical people employed have been circularized with invitations to attend.

Officers of the Bureau of Standards section of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians say frankly that so far the appeal of forming a technical union has met with only mild interest.

"The professional and technical men and women in the Government do not realize what a union can offer them in the line of education," said T. F. Michelson, of the Bureau of Standards.

So far, the Washington Chapter of the federation has six sections within the Government circles with a total membership of more than 200 among technical people and scientists. These sections include the one in the Bureau of Standards as well as those of the Model Basin of the Navy Yard, Resettlement Administration, Naval Observatory, Federal Power Commission, and the Procurement Division of the Treasury Department. In addition to the organized groups, members are scattered throughout other Government departments. Allison S. McMillin, of Rural Electrification, is president of the Washington Chapter.

"The federation is an independent group not associated with any other group or union of Government employes," Michelson said. "We want to spread throughout the entire Government service for our interests are highly specialized and the usual type of union does not have much to offer us.

"Negotiations for direct representation in the American Federation of Labor are now under way and we feel we can focus interest of Government employes on what we are trying to do if we offer them something distinctive like these lectures."

Dr. Humphreys' talk tomorrow afternoon will present the scientist's point of view on tornadoes and other phenomena of nature as related to weather disturbances.

The Washington Chapter of the F. A. E. C. T., according to an announcement in a new bulletin put out by the Standards section of the federation, is about to take up the cudgels in behalf of uncompensated overtime workers in the Resettlement Administration.

Details of what they will do in this situation have not been decided, but they will draw the attention of the heads of the Administration to the fact that considerable overtime work has gone without financial or off-time recognition.

Why are there no G-women? We were down talking to J. Edgar Hoover the other day and completely forgot to ask him that one. But he did say that all the widows of G-men killed in action have a place on the employment rolls of the bureau if they wish it. At present there are several widows of men shot down by gangsters employed both in Washington and out in the field. But we'll investigate that G-women situation and report later.

VANISHING POINTS.

Whenever I watch a better-than-average contract game I am enormously impressed (and saddened) by the fantastic number of points "chucked" by both sides. Admittedly, 100 per cent perfect bridge is not possible to mere humans. Guesses and hairsplitting decisions cannot always go right, regardless of how expert the player. It is my considered opinion that the world's greatest players throw away, on an average, 3,000 points per every session of four hours. By "throw away" I mean the difference between the score they actually make and the score they would have made if they were able to see all four hands before bidding or playing—their theoretical par, so to speak.

But when it comes to estimating the difference between theoretical par and the results obtained by average players the figures become almost astronomical! I cheerfully expect most of my readers to scoff when I say that I have seen scores of games in which 15,000 points were thrown out of the window by one team or the other! Today's hand is a mild example of how points vanish into thin air.

Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	2 spades	Pass
Pass	Pass

North's two-spade bid was well-chosen to take advantage of the part-score, and at the same time to act as a mild shut-out. East was tempted to bid three diamonds, but had visions of a large penalty in case he found partner with a "bust," and discreetly decided to pass.

West selected what turned out to be an excellent opening, the diamond ten. Dummy played low, East signaled a "come-on" with the seven, and declarer won with the ace. Now, without the slightest calculation of the danger to which he was exposing himself, declarer went about drawing trumps. The third round disclosed the bad news that East had had four trumps. Suddenly the declarer awoke to the necessity of establishing his heart suit. He led to dummy's queen, East gobbled up the trick, planked down the high spade to draw declarer's last, and rattled off five diamond tricks. Net result, 200 points for the defenders!

How simple the correct line of play would have been! Obviously, declarer had to establish hearts, and the time to do it was while dummy's trumps protected his own short trump suit from a forcing attack. Declarer's first play should have been to drive out the heart ace. He would have to follow to the diamond return, but with diamonds continued for a third round he simply should toss a losing club on the trick. From there on the defenders would be helpless. East's best play would be a club. Dummy would win the ace, and three rounds of trumps would be drawn, leaving East with the high trump. Declarer then simply would cash heart tricks until East ruffed in, eventually conceding another club trick to the enemy.

The difference between making the ice cold contract, game and rubber, and going down two tricks, was 760 points, which was considerably augmented by the fact that the opponents made rubber on the next hand.

On the Air Today

A new show and a slightly different idea in radio entertainment will be turned on tonight from one of Columbia's Broadway studio theaters. It is titled "Come On, Let's Sing," and is to be a combination of the community sing idea and a little horse play, well tempered.

Jack Arthur, musician and actor, and Tiny Ruffner, announcer (and barytone) are the only air artists to appear permanently. The "Sisters of the Skillet" Ed East and Ralph Dumke, will be guests of honor on the opening bill tonight.

The idea is: The audience sings ditties picked from the great American music bag—and Ruffner, with a portable microphone, saunters through the audience making words with the good folks from Oshkosh, Dubuque and — Washington. They'll be from those cities, because tickets are to be given almost exclusively for this show to persons living outside New York City. WJSV, at 8:30.

Cecil B. De Mille, who now directs the "Radio Theater," is taken to task today by Ronald Dawson, who knows a thing or two himself about radio drama. Mr. Dawson's letter to this desk says:

"I must disagree with your column of this morning wherein you laud the efforts of Cecil B. De Mille in his search for an actor to howl like a dog. You must know that there are records which have very fine recordings of different dogs howling. And, if Mr. De Mille knew his radio, as he should, he would have realized the futility of such a search.

"If Mr. De Mille is so idealistic that he insists upon the best for the public, then why does he not give up directing for radio for awhile and watch "One Man's Family" in rehearsal. As a matter of fact there is a man in Hollywood who could teach Cecil B. De Mille all he needs to learn about radio. And that man is just a small 'fry' in the Columbia Broadcasting System—a man named Paul Rickenbacker.

"Mr. De Mille is undoubtedly a great man in his own sphere—he is a magnificant movie director, which no one can deny, but judging by the last few shows broadcast by the 'Radio Theater' he has shown that he knows nothing of radio. Of course, the 'Radio Theater' is a great attraction. Why should it not be? Because of its backing it should have no equal in radio drama, but to me it is the weakest of all radio dramatic companies that broadcast on such a big scale.

"The Columbia Dramatic Laboratory and The Drama Guild of N. B. C. are so far superior to anything that the 'Radio Theater' has ever been able to offer the public that it is nothing short of ridiculous to have these great stars work in their programs. For sound effects, for suspense, Mr. De Mille could do no better than to listen to Phillips Lord's broadcasts.

"For true characterization, for sincere playing, there is Warden Lawes' programs and, finally, for clever writing, for really natural dialogue, Charles Tazwell and Irving Reis, of C. B. S., can teach the great director what he should know.

"I insist that Mr. De Mille would be doing the public a great turn it he tried to learn the radio game, rather than teach it to the screen stars who know less, if possible. Sorry to seem so 'sour.' But those are my sentiments."

* * * *

Goh, Mr. Dawson! Please, I didn't laud Mr. De Mille's search for a sound like a houn' dog. I just reported what was sent me.

* * * *

A long time ago I also was told that Eddy Duchin and his orchestra would replace Jacques Renard and his musicians in the Burns and Allen show. And I in turn told you so. But, whatever may have happened to delay the change, Duchin makes his debut tonight, Gracie will have to learn a new set of gags now to fit the pianist-maestro. Duchin has a very un-Renard-like figure. George Burns is reported as having remarked that tonight's show will be the first in months in which they will be able to see the orchestra.

* * * *

C. B. S., never slow to keep pace with the developments in the news, gives its Nation-wide audience a special drought broadcast this afternoon at 2. For 45 minutes the deplorable situation over vast areas of the country will be reported on direct from microphones in those areas.

Recipe Prize Is Awarded Mrs. Holmes

Capital Housewives Favor Cold Appetizers for Summer Meals.

WASHINGTON housewives are in favor of cold appetizers for summer meals, according to the number of recipes entered in their favor last week in The Post's contest for summer appetizers.

First prize, $5, is awarded Mrs. R. C. Holmes, 802 Philadelphia avenue, Silver Springs, Md., for her recipe for New Orleans Appetizer. Second prize, $3, goes to Mrs. L. R. Miller, 23 Philadelphia avenue, Takoma Park, Md., for her recipe for chilled gooseberry soup, and the three remaining prizes of $1 each to Mrs. H. S. Boteler, 6805 Forty-sixth street, Chevy Chase, Md., for her recipe for cantaloupe frappe, to Mrs. M. MacDonald, 4306 Tenth street northeast, for her recipe for clam cocktail, and to Miss Ethel M. Merritt, 7729 Sixteenth street northwest, for her recipe for raisin appetizer.

New Orleans Appetizer.

2 cups stewed tomatoes
2 slices onion
¼ cup sliced celery
2 bay leaves
1 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons sugar
1 cup water
2 cloves
1 cup sliced shrimp
½ cup diced cucumber
¼ cup chopped green pepper
2 teaspoons unflavored gelatin
2 tablespoons cold water

Combine tomatoes, onion, celery, bay leaves, cloves, salt, sugar and one cup of water. Cook covered, over low flame, about 15 minutes. Strain and add gelatin softened in the cold water. Stir and chill, then add the diced cucumber, green pepper and the shrimp sliced through the center and cut in small pieces. Pour into a freezing tray and freeze to a mushy stage. Serve in dainty glass cups.

Chilled Gooseberry Soup.

1 quart gooseberries
6 cups water
¾ cup honey
¼ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon grated lemon rind
1 tablespoon lemon juice
4 tablespoons quick cooking tapioca

Wash gooseberries, add cold water; bring to boiling point and simmer until tender. Force through sieve, return to fire, add tapioca and salt and cook until clear. Remove from fire, add honey, lemon juice and rind, blend well, and chill thoroughly. Serve in cups.

Cantaloupe Frappe.

3 small cantaloupe
2 cups canned unsweetened pineapple juice
¾ cup sugar
3 large lemons
½ cup water
1-3 teaspoon allspice
1 egg white

Combine sugar, water and allspice. Boil three minutes. Cool and add pineapple and lemon juices. Freeze until mushy. Fold in stiffly beaten egg white. Freeze until hard. Cut the cantaloupes in half, remove seeds and fill centers with sherbet.

Clam Cocktail.

2 dozen clams, shucked
1 teaspoon onion salt
1 tablespoon tabasco sauce
2 tablespoons lemon juice
⅓ cup sherry
1 egg white

Halve and simmer clams in 2 quarts of water till liquid is reduced one-half. Strain, using liquid only, to which add salt, tabasco and lemon juice. Chill in refrigerator until serving time. Add beaten egg white to clarify and sherry. Pour into glasses that have been one-quarter filled with crushed ice.

Raisin Appetizer.

Pour some sherry wine flavoring over seedless raisins and let stand in refrigerator for about an hour. Make a sauce of one cup of tomato ketchup, season with a dash of tabasco sauce, celery seed and the juice of two lemons. Add a few chopped almonds. Fill glasses and chill thoroughly.

New Ways Of Canning

JARS of mixed vegetables—don't they come in handy and taste delicious all year long in soups, stews and salads! Equal parts peas, carrots, corn and celery make an excellent mixture. Dice carrots and celery, then cook all four vegetables in a little water before processing in jars or tin cans.

And here's something new and different—Creole tomatoes. Wash, stem, seed and chop fine a dozen medium-sized green peppers. Peel and slice a quart of white onions. Simmer the two until tender. Scald, peel and cut small, enough tomatoes to equal peppers and onions in bulk. Add to first mixture and continue to simmer until tomatoes are tender. Pack in hot sterilized jars.

Where do you get this chart? In our 40-page booklet, "New Ways of Canning Fruits, Vegetables and Meats." All about canning in glass or tin. Hot pack, cold pack, open kettle, pressure cooker. Slick new recipes for chicken, meat and for preserves, pickles, relishes.

Combination Sandwich-Salad for Mid-Day Meals

The sandwich-salad idea is an unbeatable combination for midday summer meals. And now you have the latest innovation pictured above—a sandwich that is a salad as well. The jelly-roll idea has been used in wrapping fresh buttered bread around a delicious filling of chopped meat, hard-cooked egg, sweet pickles and mayonnaise. Parsley sprigs and radish roses garnish the salad sandwich.

Sandwich-Salad Luncheon Ideal One for Summer Days

Ease of Preparation, Economy and Appeal to Appetite When Mercury Soars Make Wholesome Meal Popular With Housewives.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THE SANDWICH-SALAD luncheon is a popular one and many housewives find that for sheer satisfaction, ease of preparation and economy it is the ideal type of mid-day meal for warm days.

Sandwiches that are dainty and well prepared are always popular especially with children, and salads never fail to appeal to the appetite when the mercury is climbing from 90 to 100.

From a point of economy, salads and sandwiches are favorites with the woman who has leftovers in her refrigerator. Cooked or raw vegetables and fruits of all kinds, meats, fish, eggs, and cheese can be used to fashion an interesting salad or sandwich.

The pleasure in finding a wholesome and attractive meal that demands little or no cooking is a boon to the busy housewife too, especially in the summer. A hot dish may be supplied by the use of the elaborate array of canned soups offered at your grocery store. These take but a few minutes to open, heat and serve.

But every housewife knows that hitting upon a good combination and sticking to it will not be satisfactory for very long unless originality and ingenuity are applied in large doses. And this is just another reason why the sandwich-salad combination is such a successful one, for there is no end to the way in which sandwiches and salads can be varied.

The use of different kinds of breads—raisin, graham, cracked wheat, white, rye, fruit, nut, etc.—is one of the easiest and most satisfactory ways of varying sandwiches.

A new salad could be created every summer noon and there would still be new ones to serve during the winter. Popular during the summer, however, just as one suggestion, are stuffed tomatoes. These may be stuffed with any of the following combinations and make an interesting dish when accompanied by sandwiches with a filling that is complementary to the one used in the tomato—minced chicken, fish or meat with crisp celery, cottage cheese, shredded Swiss or American cheese, mixed vegetable salad, stuffed eggs, etc.

A happy thought when discussing the sandwich-salad combination is the all-in-one salad sandwich. Here is the basic recipe, but it can be varied using different types of bread and different fillings.

Salad Sandwich Luncheon.

(Individual servings.)
Unsliced bread
1 hard cooked egg
½ cup boiled ham, diced
2 sweet pickles, chopped
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
Butter

Trim crusts from bread and slice lengthwise. Spread lightly with butter. Cut egg in small pieces and mix with the ham, pickle and mayonnaise. Pile lightly into center of slice. Bring the ends over the filling. Fasten with toothpicks. Wrap in waxed paper and store in cool place until ready to serve. Remove toothpicks, decorate with bits of parsley and radishes.

Chopped Ripe Olives Improve Deviled Eggs

Deviled eggs are especially delicious for very special buffet or picnic refreshments when seasoned hard cooked egg yolks are further reinforced with the finely chopped ripe olives available in small cans.

Some prefer to use small ripe olives which may be chopped to similar fineness and added to seasoned egg yolks in small quantities. This makes a truly delicious egg recipe at small cost and with little effort.

Garnish center of plate with mayonnaise mound. Be sure that all ingredients are very cold when salad is served. Lettuce should be crisp and green.

Best Fried Chicken Recipes To Be Awarded Post Prizes

THE PROPER METHOD of frying chicken has always been a point for discussion, and this week Washington housewives will be given the opportunity of airing their views on this subject, for fried chicken has been chosen as the theme of the current Post recipe contest.

Your favorite method of frying chicken is requested by Dorothea Duncan, Home Economics Editor of The Post. Cash awards will be offered for the five most interesting recipes. The first prize is $5, the second $3, and the three remaining prizes $1 each.

To enter the contest merely write out your favorite recipe for fried chicken and send it to orothea Duncan, in care of The Washington Post. Be sure to mail your recipe in time to reach this office not later than Saturday morning.

Olives Aid in Making Left-Over Meat Dishes

Small amounts of leftover chicken or tender veal may be supplemented in quantity and flavor with sliced ripe olives to make sufficient material for luncheon croquettes.

To prepare these leftover meat croquettes: Use 1 cup of diced chicken and 1 cup of sliced ripe olives in a sauce containing 2 cups of milk or rich chicken stock, 4 tablespoons flour and 3 tablespoons of butter. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Shape into croquettes, dip in beaten egg and roll in soft white bread crumbs. Fry in deep fat until well browned.

Cakes Easily Made By Prepared Mixes

Here is a little tip to the woman who has a family of cake-lovers to feed. Why not try the many delicious already prepared cake mixes while the weather is warm instead of spending so much time in the kitchen mixing an entire batter? There are several companies that offer these cake mixes and all are satisfactory. One brand has three flavors to offer—devil's food, spice and gingerbread.

These mixes take but a few minutes to stir to a batter consistency. They can be baked in layer, loaves, 2-inch high square pans or as cup cakes. Frosting is optional. They are delicious without frosting served warm with fresh fruits or your family will be delighted with gelatin mixtures. The members of your family will be delighted with the gingerbread served warm with chocolate sauce or whipped cream.

These cake mixes are inexpensive, too, and the cake after baking will keep fresh approximately the length of time a home mixed cake will.

Two rules to follow in making good iced coffee

1. Make it strong

Iced coffee must be made stronger than coffee to be served hot. This compensates for the dilution of melting ice.

2. Use good coffee

Use good coffee—a coffee that has a heavy body to withstand the extreme changes in temperature—that's SANICO COFFEE.

Ring Bearer, 5, Wins Fight to Wear Uniform

'Robbie' Robertson to Don Diminutive Attire at Fort Myer Nuptials.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Military men—even very young ones—must wear military uniforms at weddings.

This important decision was handed down by Master William Alexander Robert Robertson, jr., son of Capt. William A. R. Robertson, of Bolling Field. The question arose in connection with the approaching wedding of Miss Betty O'Malley, daughter of Commander and Mrs. John O'Malley, whose marriage to Lieut. Robert Hollis Strauss will take place in the Fort Myer Chapel Friday evening. Miss O'Malley invited Master Robbie to act as her ring bearer. He accepted promptly and with pleasure. Then the subject of clothes arose. All of the other men, the best man and the ushers, were to be in uniform. Something in the way of a white satin page's suit or perhaps a little Lord Fauntleroy outfit was suggested for Robbie and therewith, so far as he was concerned, the wedding was ruined. The idea of wearing a "pretty suit" while the rest of the Army and Navy men were in uniform was out of the question.

Robbie, who is 5, told his mother he did not want to disappoint Miss O'Malley, but he could not be ring bearer unless he could have a uniform like the other men.

Robbie Wins Out.

Miss O'Malley therefore will have a bridal party with all the "men" in military dress, for Robbie is to bear the ring as originally planned.

He will wear a tailor-made uniform which is an exactt replica of that his father wore as a member o fthe British Royal Flying Corps during the World War. It has been made for the occasion, with a belt, brass buttons, the insignia of the flying corps, captain's bars on the shoulder and two of his father's decorations pinned on the breast for good measure. The "captain" also will wear the expression of complete astisfaction which comes of being perfectly dressed for the occasion.

Robbie was born on Navy Day, five years ago. He always has lived at Bolling Field, where the air corps observes Navy Day with a celebration and he has come to believe it is staged for him just as the annual party his mother plans. Despite the significance of his birthday, however, he is a staunch supporter of the Army.

Hopes to Be Flier.

His father, who was nicknamed "War" Robertson because his three initials spell the word, was born in Aberdeen, Scotland, and served in the British Royal Air Corps from 1915 until the World War ended. He came to the United States in 1921 and, desiring to continue his flying, took the course at Kelly Field as though he had never seen a plane. He was commissioned as an officer in the Air Corps of the United States Army in 1927.

In 1929, he married Mrs. Margaret McLean Perry, who for 14 years was secretary to the late Speaker of the House, Joseph. W. Byrns.

Their young son, who bears the name which is carried by every first son in the Robertson family, expects to be an Army flier like his father as soon as he is old enough.

Will Act as Ring Bearer

New Navy Yard Chief Due Soon

Rear Admiral George Pettengill, U. S. N., is expected to arrive here on July 15 to assume his new duties as commandant of the Washington Navy Yard.

Of interest to the Capital, in view of his appointment here, is the recent announcement of the engagement of the son of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Pettengill, Mr. George Pettengill 3d, and Miss Anne Dieffenbach, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hagen Dieffenbach, of Newark, N. J.

Miss Dieffenbach made her debut at the Essex Country Club, the winter of 1929, and is a member of the Junior League and the Orange Lawn Tennis Club.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Mother of Three, Resident in Virginia, Needs Advice On Planning Children's Summer Outing.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have in mind the case of a very worthy mother who has three childreen of 12, 9 and 7 years, respectively. All are very bright, having passed in their different grades. The mother is employed. The father is unemployed, although he earns a few dollars now and then as an auto salesman. The mother wishes to place the children in some summer camp or home, so that they will not be compelled to be on the streets so much during the summer months. She can pay a nominal sum. The 12-year-old boy is a Scout, but she cannot afford to pay the amount they ask and she prefers to keep the three children together. This is a most worthy case. What would you advise? Sincerely

ARLINGTON RESIDENT.

• • • •

DEAR ARLINGTON RESIDENT: If there are any children's summer camps or homes in Virginia that are within reach of this mother's purse, it seems to me Mrs. Mae E. Jacobs should know about them. Mrs. Jacobs, who has offices in the courthouse at Clarendon, Va., telephone CLarendon 3200, is superintendent of the Arlington County Board of Public Welfare and as one professionally interested in promoting the social welfare of children, will no doubt be glad to co-operate with this mother in keeping her children off the streets and away from undesirable associates. In suggesting Mrs. Jacobs as a source of information and assistance, I am not implying that the mother seek charity, but merely that she go to the best informed source for the guidance she stands in need of.

• • • •

If there are no such summer homes or camps in Virginia, Mrs. Jacobs will know what agencies in the District of Columbia to contact in aiding this mother solve the problem of her children's vacation. All agencies interested in safeguarding the health and morals of minors make it their business to know the possible answers to such questions as this.

Seeks Dance Instruction.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH:—I wonder if you could tell me if there is a refined and efficient teaching place in town which gives summer courses in modern ballroom dancing. I know of several which gives such classes in the winter months, but which recess during the summer.

• • • •

Since I am going away to college in the fall I wish, among other things, to brush up on my dancing and although I would prefer an advanced class (since I already know how to dance) yet I would join almost any class for the regular practise.

• • • •

I wish to add that I have been reading your column rather regularly recently and wish to compliment you on the good judgment and common sense you use in answering letters addressed to you . . . Thanking you for any suggestions, I am, sincerely yours,

• • • •

READER.

DEAR READER: By sitting down at the telephone and diligently applying myself, I could possibly dig up a list of places in Washington which offer the sort of course you are looking for. But I would suggest you do that for yourself. Call the local Community Center, NAtional 6000; the local Y. W. C. A., MEtropolitan 2102, and then go down the list of dancing academies which you will find in the classified section of the local telephone directory. If you will do this, and if there are any dancing classes conducted here during the summer months, you cannot fail to hear about them. Thank you for your interest in and approval of this column.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Lime Deposits From Salvia.

The entrance of the digestive tract—the mouth—is an important receptacle. Food coming into the body at this point begins its adventure in digestion. The cavity is lined with mucous membrane and contains the teeth and the tongue, which, aided by the powerful muscles attached to the lower jaw, macerate and mix the eatables.

The salivary glands empty their indispensable secretions into the mouth. The reason is that mucous surfaces must be kept moist. If they are allowed to dry they become irritated, cracked, and fissured, and inflammation and infection are likely to follow. These glands can secrete only when the blood and tissues contain sufficient water. The condition of travelers who attempt to cross desert wastes without an adequate supply presents anything but an enticing picture. The mouth, throat, tongue, lips, and nose become increasingly dry—blackened by bleeding from many breaks. For only a relatively few hours can this situation be endured.

Again, saliva is needed to furnish enough moisture for the process of grinding food so that it may assume a pastelike consistency, and thus be swallowed easily. Any one who has had an excessively dry mouth even for a short period can well remember the circumstances because of the discomfort that ensued.

When body structures function well they give us little concern, and we sometimes forget the great importance of these small salivary glands that produce approximately a quart of fluid each 24 hours.

Stones May Form.

The subject that interests us at the moment is the fact that stones may form within the ducts that lead from these secreting structures. As a rule they are free and open, and the saliva is sufficiently dilute so that mineral matter will not be deposited, but should a foreign substance, such as a toothbrush bristle or a bit of tartar from the teeth, find its way into one of these channels enough interference with the flow may be established to cause trouble. The concretions thus formed may be single or multiple, and vary in size from that of a grain of sand to an inch in diameter. They are usually irregular in shape and composed largely of calcium phosphate or calcium oxalate. Occasionally they are found in the glands themselves.

When we speak of a clean mouth we must admit that there really is no such thing. We cannot find in all the world a sterile adult mouth—that is, one entirely free from bacteria. All articles of food are not clean, and the number of parasites that inhabit the average oral cavity is very large. As we know, bits of food may lodge in the crevices about the teeth and adhere to the mucous lining. These nearly always undergo putrefaction and decomposition now and then with the formation of products that are toxic. The condition of the tongue contributes to the insanitary state of affairs as it may be heavily coated with food debris, fungus growths, or bacteria. It is little wonder, then, that in certain cases the outlets of the salivary ducts become clogged.

Symptoms caused by a calculus may be mild at first. A small deposit may persist for years without causing trouble. If blocking occurs, however, colicky pains may be felt periodically in the vicinity of the gland or along the course of the duct. Sometimes an enlargement of the gland will be observable. If the stone slips out because of pressure, well and good, as drainage is then re-established and the swelling recedes promptly. Surgery may be required in the removal of a deposit that has become too large to pass along the course of one of these narrow channels.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

WHAT'S A GIRL to do when she trips blithely from going to parties to being engaged to getting married . . . all amid pretty dresses and corsages and invitations to this and that? Then all of a sudden she's got a house to keep and things to buy and plans to make that she hadn't given much time or thought to ahead of time.

Well, that's all right. She's got all the rest of her life to select furniture and get settled. And only a little while as an engaged girl. We have a pretty young friend who's just at that stage now of happy bewilderment in the details of making a home. They've bought a roomy old Dutch colonial house and she's scampering around trying to dig up ideas for making it the sweetest house in the world.

Her brand-new husband is a tweedy, pipe-smoking, rod-and-gun sort of man, who just fits into that placid, unpretentious house. And she wants it always to fit him just as well as it does to begin with. So she's getting substantial things for the house that look like he feels about things. English cottage furniture, for the most part—in oak, of rugged lines. Dutch blue, white and nice brown homespun plaids.

The woodwork, including the built-in benches at either side of the fireplace, is all in white enamel, and she's having the rough plaster walls done in a Dutch blue. The fireplace is red brick, and she's having a room-size machine-hooked rug in just about that same shade of brick color. Across the mantel shelf she will have a row of shining brass plates and pitchers and jugs. The sofa wil lbe in the brown plaid material; one chair will be in solid brown and another will be in yellow. The window curtains are going to be yellow, too . . . with clusters of bright pottery fruit for tie-backs—then no draperies.

But isn't she much too fluttery to fit such a picture? No, indeed, she insists—any more than she is too fluttery to fit that man she's married. She intends to do both jobs beautifully, thank you.

Says Handshakes Make Ballots

MRS. NAN WOOD HONEYMAN, candidate for Congress from Oregon and girlhood friend of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, advocates the house-to-house plan of campaign.

Neighborly Chat Declared Woman's Best Bet in Politics

Mrs. Honeyman Finds Feminine Sex Must Use Different Methods in Campaigning for Office.

THE NEIGHBORLY CHAT is still woman's best bet in politics. Radio and front-porch campaigns and impassioned oratory at county picnics may be all right for the men candidates, but the woman running for office had best stick to what has become the successor to baby kissing—the personal interview.

This campaign philosophy has been evolved by Mrs. Nan Wood Honeyman, Democratic candidate for Congress from Oregon, and personal friend of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. Mrs. Honeyman, who has been visiting in the East since the Democratic National Convention, leaves this week for her home in Portland to get ready for her election campaign.

House-to-house visiting and personal talks with people in all walks of life—millhands, office workers, factory women—will be Mrs. Honeyman's method of rounding up votes. It is a method she used successfully in winning her way into the Oregon State Legislature and in winning the Democratic nomination for Congress in her district over four party rivals by a plurality of 2,000 votes.

During the preliminary campaign she ruled out public meetings in favor of house-to-house canvassing.

"Telling a weary audience how good I am from a platform doesn't win me any votes," she said. "When we meet the voter in his home, we iron out differences and by the time I leave I know pretty well whether or not he and his family are supporting me.

"By talking with voters directly I find out what they are thinking and what things they are interested in. I can use this knowledge to advantage in my future appeals. I can thus more intelligently tackle the problems with which I have to deal."

By such personal contact, Mrs. Honeyman believes she has overcome much prejudice against women in politics. Men voters meeting a woman candidate face to face and talking with her are more apt to be won than from hearing her on a platform, she says.

During her primary campaign Mrs. Honeyman went up and down many a city street ringing doorbells and talking personally to housewives. At noon hours she went to large industrial plants and chatted with employes. She concentrated particularly on this method of campaign in districts in which she considered herself weak.

Any woman entering politics had best train herself for personal work, Mrs. Honeyman believes. "Don't ever think," she says, "that the day of personal campaigning is over. Voters want to know as well as possible those who are representing them."

Mrs. Honeyman's election would bring to Congress another girlhood friend of the President's wife. The daughter of C. E. S. Wood, widely known writer and lawyer, Mrs. Honyeman has known the President and Mrs. Roosevelt since all were in their teens. Theodore Roosevelt's family and the Douglas Robinsons were friends of her parents. Her chum when she attended school in New York City was Helen Roosevelt, half niece of the present Executive, whose Hyde Park home joined his.

Like Representative Isabella Greenway, of New Mexico, Mrs. Honeyman was associated with Mrs. Roosevelt as a bridesmaid. At the marriage of her friend, Helen Roosevelt, to Teddy Robinson, first cousin of the First Lady, Eleanor Roosevelt and Nan Wood were briedsmaids and Franklin Roosevelt was an usher.

Mrs. Honeyman recalls that the girl bridesmaids wore frocks of ruffled organdie on real lace. Their picture hats were of lacy straw with wide tulle bows across the front and they carried bouquets of pink roses.

Wrong Heels Cause of Most Walking Ills

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

AS A GROUP, women walk badly and run worse. They tend to turn out their toes, swing their hips, totter on towering heels or stick out in the wrong places.

To watch a procession of women is an exposition of what not to do. To see a woman run is even more startling. Most of them either turn out their toes so that they swing from side to side, or turn up their toes, in an effort, it would seem, to stay on their heels only. The average woman makes enough effort when she walks or runs to carry her twice the distance she is attempting to cover.

Of course, the high heels which girls insist on wearing before they learn to walk well in flat heels are partly to blame. High heels for dancing or even for dress occasions are one thing, but when they are worn for walking and standing over long periods of time, they are unhealthy and apt to injure the whole system, however elegant and dainty they may be thought to make the foot look.

Feet are too important to be treated with indifference, and gait and posture are too closely related to health and vitality to be neglected. The training should begin when the child first begins to stand and toddle about. Girl or boy, it should be taught to keep its feet straight ahead like an Indian. If anything, it should toe slightly in rather than out.

The foot should be placed on the ground as squarely as possible. The heel will touch first, but the foot need not be at an acute angle with the leg for every step. The whole body should be relaxed, but erect, hips and arms inconspicuous.

And Call It Accident

By Mrs. Belloc Lowndes

CHAPTER 27.

In the end it was arranged that the husband and wife should go up to London and inspect the house, for Ruth was quite willing to abide by their decision.

"We may as well clear up everything we can," said the captain suddenly. "If Helen wants to be an artist there's no reason why she shouldn't be an artist. She can come up with us tomorrow, and she or I can go and see the head of that art school you used to know, darling."

Iris was taken aback by this suggestion. She disliked her stepdaughter even more than he did, and the thought of having her as a companion during their visit to London did not appeal to her. However, she acquiesced to his plan, and Ruth felt honestly delighted. "I'd like to be in on that," she cried gayly.

"How do you mean?" he looked at her coldly.

"I mean I should like to help pay for that girl's art education."

"That won't be in the least necessary. Helen has her own money. The real reason why I want to take her up with us is to see whether it's the sort of place where she could board this winter. We certainly don't want her living with us."

His wife's face cleared; most heartily did she agree with that last remark.

"What will you do with yourself all day?" inquired Iris affectionately. "We'll have to start early and come back late."

"I have it!" exclaimed Philip "My aunt is always tormenting you to go up to the manor house. Why not propose yourself to lunch?"

"I don't think I could do that."

"Of course you could. Or rather Iris could for you. She's got to go up and see the old lady. She's been sent for and it's a royal command, of course."

"I would far rather stay quietly here by myself."

"Just as you like, my dear," Iris looked at her, and it was an anxious, questioning look. Perhaps the girl was beginning to understand at last that Lady Cicester was hunting her with a view of securing her large fortune and her young attractive self for her son.

So, during her short call on her husband's aunt she said not one word of Ruth Starling, but when after leaving the old lady she ran into Lord John there came over her a sudden fierce determination to prevent a meeting between the two during the long day the rest of the party would be away.

"We're all going to London tomorrow to inspect a furnished house," she observed, and she saw with grim satisfaction that he looked sorry to hear such news. And as she made her way back to the castle she felt, she could hardly have said why, far more lighthearted than usual. As she had grown to know Ruth better she no longer believed that the girl would mary for rank and position. She had half feared Lord John would offer himself and his great possessions to the girl during the stay of the American ambassador under his roof. It was a distinct relief that he had not done so. She would have been surprised to learn that John Pendervil would have thought himself taking an unfair advantage of Ruth had he done such a thing as that.

When within sight of the castle Iris turned her thoughts away from Ruth to consider Philip. Though everything was going so well, and he had far more reason to feel content than he had done for years, she sensed all was not well with him. He seemed to be waiting for something. What could it be? Often in the watches of the night when they both lay awake side by side, she would wrack her brains wondering what it was he was keeping from her.

Now and again there shot athwart her a thrill of uneasy fear and terror. Had Philip done some dangerous thing in the past, which he had thought obliterated, but which had now risen menacingly before him? She hated the old money lender, Doll Rawle—hated and feared him, too. Why should the tnousand pounds she had extracted from Ruth Starling be wanted by Rawle? Into what new commitment with that man had her husband entered?

Lord John was in his workshop, finishing an elaborate carved mantelpiece. It was a commission from a wealthy man who had settled down in the neighborhood five years ago. As is generally the case with a man who has plenty of money, the future marquis of Cicester was much pleased with this commission, and he was ashamed to see how very little he had got on with the work since the castle had passed into the temporary possession of the Trefanes.

The knowledge that he would not be able to see Ruth Starling today brought with it a sense of frustration and right down unhappiness of which he felt ashamed. And yet he had made up his mind, since the week-end she had stayed at the manor house, that it would not only be useless to ask her to marry him, but would injure that which he so greatly valued—their already close friendship. What had brought him to this conclusion was watching her at what had been a merry house party. Everybody had liked her, and she had seemed to like everybody.

During this last week, though they had met daily, he had not felt that their friendship had progressed any further than it had done before those days when they had been living under the same roof, and so had been constantly thrown together.

After he had spoiled various pieces of wood he got up, and leaving his workshop, went off for a walk, during which he felt full of bitter thoughts.

And then when he came home, his mother observed: "I'm sorry now we didn't ask Ruth Starling to lunch, but I only heard a minute ago that she is spending the day alone in the castle."

"I think you are mistaken, mother. The whole castle party have gone to London, including even Helen Bates."

"I'm not mistaken," she said with spirit. "How long will it take you to learn, John, that I very seldom am mistaken when I make a statement? Iris and Philip, together with that tiresome girl, did go off to London early this morning, to see a furnished house they've persuaded Ruth Starling to share with them this autumn. But for some reason or other they left here. Troutbeck was with me this morning, and told me. But Ruth is what I call foolishly kind. Troutbeck says that she had given the two young maids the day off! I hope that doesn't mean she is the kind of person that thinks all men and women are equal!"

Lord John looked at his mother with a twinkle in his eye. "I have always understood that we are all equal in the sight of God," he observed.

School Board Hears Pleas On Pay Boost

Murphy Asks Decision in Favor of Blanket Salary Rises.

The issue of schooling versus practical experience as the principal factor in developing the modern school teacher was brought to sharp focus before the Board of Education's special vocational education committee yesterday afternoon.

The committee, Henry Gilligan, chairman, conducted its final hearing on the question of automatic salary increases for the 86 teachers in the vocational schools recently raised from an elementary to a junior high status.

Without voicing its own position, the committe heard Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, on the one side, and several representatives of the Teachers' Union and the Central Labor Union, on the other.

Raise in Salary.

Dr. Ballou spoke in behalf of his already announced proposal—that those teachers who can individually qualify as junior high teachers be raised to the junior high salary level, and that the equivalent of a high-school education be the minimum for teachers' training.

The teachers, led by E. J. Murphy, president of the Vocational Association, urged the committee and the school board to decide in favor of a blanket increase for all the teachers now in the vocational education department, and to consider their trade experience as more important than high school and college diplomas, or lack of them.

Murphy and those who spoke with him argued that Congress, in passing the bill to raise the status of vocational schools, intended that salaries of teachers should be increased automatically.

"Teachers in the system have already demonstrated their qualifications to teach, or they would have been dismissed," declared Miss Selma Borchardt, of Local No. 8, Teachers' Union. "We believe, therefore, they are entitled to the salary commensurate with the status of the position they hold."

The 'learn by doing' method of education is now gaining widespread recognition, Miss Borchardt reminded the committee. She contended that teachers who have learned the trades and crafts they are teaching by actual experience in the trade field are as well qualified as those who have "taken courses in school."

Dr. Ballou admitted the importance of "practical experience," but insisted that knowledge in the field and "ability to teach" are two different things.

"We want people who can be competent as teachers, as well as craftsmen," he said.

Would Deprive None.

Ballou assured Murphy that the school administration contemplated depriving no teacher now in the system of a job because of the new setup. He insisted, however, on the right to keep teachers on an elementary school salary rating until they qualify as junior high teachers.

Albert N. Dennis, editor of the Trade Unionist, speaking for the Central Labor Union education committee, said the union teachers feared the school administration might bring in new teachers from outside of Washington "who are better fitted academically, but not so well trained in the respective vocational fields."

Both Gilligan and Ballou denied such a course is contemplated.

Mrs. Mary Jones, of Local 27, Teachers Union, said, "In all fairness the trades teachers should have the money which the new act entitles them to." Robert A. Pelham, director of the Capital News Service, said he "felt sure" that Congress intended the vocational teachers to be "blanketed" into the new salary schedule.

The Junior High salary bracket would give the vocational teachers from $200 to $600 a year more than they have been receiving.

John H. Wilson, of the special vocational education committee, and Gilligan were the only School Board members at the hearing. Gilligan had planned to call a special board meeting after the committee session to settle the salary matter. He could not do so, however, for lack of a quorum. George Whitwell, third member of the vocational committee, was not present.

Capitol Cleanup Follows Congress

Capitol Hill Cleanup Campaign Under Way; Hundreds on Job

'Gus' Cook Supervising Army of Workmen Washing, Polishing and Painting; Air Conditioning Plant Being Installed.

Now that Congress has adjourned and things have quieted down, there's a big "cleanup" campaign under way on Capitol Hill.

For instance, 14,581 square feet of skylights must be washed; 10 acres of floor space and three times that area of side walls and ceilings must be cleaned; doorknobs on 550 doors must be polished; 697 windows must be shined; 140 fireplaces must be cleared out; 241 basins and sinks must be scoured and 325 works of art must be overhauled.

And in addition to all this, a $2,500,000 air-conditioning system must be installed—all before the next session of Congress.

And take it from Arthur E. "Gus" Cook, supervising engineer of the Capitol, it is no simple hot-water task to direct the project and see that some 900 workmen are kept busy.

Is Everywhere, Supervising.

From early morning until late at night, Gus is first in one place and then another, checking, rechecking and supervising throughout the huge Capitol Building. And not only that, but he must keep an eye on the Senate and both House Office Buildings. The same "cleanup" must be done in those buildings, as well. After the new cooling system is completed, each office in all four structures must be repainted.

The air conditioning project was authorized by the last Congress. Next summer, not only the House and Senate chambers but all corridors and committee rooms in the Capitol will be cooled by conditioned air.

In preparation for the elaborate air cooling system, Capitol workmen have been laboring at night during the last six months. When Congress adjourned, work began in earnest. The system will be operated from a central plant—an addition to the present Capitol power plant. This will necessitate construction of ducts, vents and power lines.

Although the work is being done under the general supervision of David Lynn, architect of the Capitol, Cook is in direct charge. He said, however, that no efforts will be made to extend the air conditioning system into the Capitol rotunda.

Holes Bored in Walls.

Huge holes have been bored in the old Capitol walls to make ready for the air-cooling equipment. Committee rooms and offices of famous past and present statesmen have been torn to pieces. Bricks, which were laid in place hundreds of years ago, have been removed to make space.

And while all this is going on, Cook must see to it that the 107 Capitol elevators are reconditioned and made ready for next year. He estimates that by the middle of August, 200 extra workmen will be taken on to augment the regular staff of 754 men.

In some places, workmen have found Capitol walls to be 16 feet thick. It was feared at first that this might delay preparations, but Cook feels certain the entire job will be completed by October 31.

Action Delayed On Selections Of 2 D. C. Aids

Identities of Corporation Counsel, Poundmaster Still Undecided.

The District Commissioners yesterday postponed action on the appointments to two municipal posts in which there is widespread interest—those of corporation counsel and poundmaster.

As to the corporation counsel's job, which has been vacant since E. Barrett Prettyman resigned three months ago, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, president of the board, said the Commissioners decided to await the return of Commissioner George E. Allen, as the office comes under his administration.

The two leading candidates for the post are Elwood Seal assistant corporation counsel and William A Roberts, people's counsel. The former has the backing of Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, and other influential Senators, while Roberts is backed principally by Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee.

The Commissioners decided to summon several of the leading applicants for the job of poundmaster to the District Building next Friday for personal interviews before making their selection.

There are more than a score of candidates for the poundmaster's job, made vacant by the death of Walter R. Smith, and most of them have numerous indorsers on Capitol Hill.

Oregon's Pioneers Honored by New U. S. Stamp Issue

One hundred years ago two courageous American couples broke through to the Oregon Territory and became its first white settlers.

Yesterday Postmaster General James A. Farley, United States Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, and Roy North, deputy Third Assistant Postmaster General, stood by the presses of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing began to produce another issue for stamp collectors.

The Rev. Henry H. Spalding and Dr. Marcus Whitman and their wives, the pioneers, are commemorated in purple ink. The stamp is the shape of a special delivery stamp. The central design is an outline map of the old Oregon Territory, which today comprises the States of Idaho, Oregon and Washington and parts of Montana and Wyoming.

In honor of the Oregon Territory Centennial, the first batch of these stamps will go on sale July 14 at Daniel, Wyo.; Missoula, Mont.; Lewiston, Idaho; Astoria, Oreg., and Walla Walla, Wash. Collectors who want first-day covers can send up to ten self-addressed envelopes to postmasters at these towns.

Budget Call To Cite Need Of Economy

Auditor Stresses Fiscal Outlook With Deficit of $960,365.

Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, yesterday began drafting the call to departmental heads for 1938 estimates after the commissioners had approved his recommendation that the $1.50 tax rate on realty and personal property be continued for the current fiscal year.

A keynote of strict economy is expected to dominate the budget call this year because of the impending net revenue deficit of $960,365 with which the District will end this year according to the fiscal forecast of the auditor.

"The District will have to economize," Maj. Donovan said, "in view of the present fiscal outlook."

Melvin C. Hazen, president of the board, expressed a similar point of view in explaining how the 1938 budget estimates will be drafted to make allowances for the uncertain sum to come from the Federal Government.

Economical Basis.

"We will prepare our estimates, as usual," he said, "and will keep them on as economical a basis as possible. As we won't know what Federal contribution will be recommended to Congress before January, we will merely list our needs as against our anticipated revenue.

"This gap will then have to be filled in by Congress, either by a more adequate Federal contribution, new tax revenue, or both."

The gap this year between revenue of an unappropriated surplus of nue and expenditures is nearly $4,000,000, but the carrying over $2,758,044 from the fiscal year 1936 cuts down the actual deficit to only $960,365.

Hazen said the Commissioners will be prepared to recommend new taxes, if necessary, after the President submits his fiscal relations report to Congress. A special committee of District officials is now engaged in surveying the possible sources of additional revenue.

Increase Requests.

One of the factors that will offset any economies that can be effected in municipal operating costs, however, will be the requests of several departments, notably the Public Welfare and Fire Departments, for an increase in personnel so that overtime employment may be eliminated in conformance with the schedule of hours adopted by the Civil Service Commission for all Federal and District employes.

This elimination of overtime work was suggested in an amendment to the Government leave bills, adopted at the last session, providing for a recording of all extra hours of employment throughout the service.

Paul Kirby, acting director of welfare, said that the item in the Welfare Department will be large because such a large number of employes at the institution work much more than the 39-hour week observed by the majority of District employes.

Whether Congress will consent to the additional employes, however, is conjectural. Similar requests have been made in the past only to be rejected by either the Budget Bureau or the Congressional committees.

Old Racket Nets Change for $20 And Ginger Ale

A well-planned and-cooly carried-out holdup was executed in an alley in the rear of 1609 T street northwest last night with William Clifton, 21, colored delivery man for the New Hampshire Markets, as the victim.

The market received a telephone order asking that 12 bottles of ginger ale and change for $20 be sent to apartment 210 at 1833 New Hampshire avenue northwest.

Shortly afterward Clifton went out to make another delivery. In an alley in the rear of the market he was accosted by two men. "Is this the order for 210?" one of them asked.

"No," said Clifton, and continued unmolested.

On his next trip he took the ginger ale and change for $20. He met the same two men. "Is this the order for 210?" they asked again.

"Yes," said Clifton, honestly enough.

"Then hand it over," the spokesman replied, producing a revolver.

Clifton complied and the two men escaped with booty—in specie and in ginger ale—totaling $20. Investigation by police disclosed that the occupant of the apartment at 1833 New Hampshire avenue had been absent from the city for two weeks.

The National Boy Scout jamboree, canceled last August, will be held here from June 30 to July 9, 1937, Boy Scout officials announced last night in New York.

The jambouree, which is attended by thousands of Scouts from all parts of the world, was canceled because of an infantile paralysis outbreak in nearby Virginia.

How the District's New Police Court Will Look

Project Is Sped in Hope of Getting Appropriation in Next Budget.

The allotment of $15,000 for preparing plans and specifications for the improvement of the Washington Channel waterfront as authorized by Congress last August was approved yesterday by Secretary of War Dern.

The plans, it is hoped, can be completed in time to include some appropriation for actual work on the project in the next budget. It is planned to extend the project through five to eight years. The expenditure will be about $2,000,000.

Included in the plan of improvement is the making over of the city side of the channel and the improving of the Anacostia River. A turning basin is to be erected near the Navy Yard and the District pier is to be rebuilt and moved to the Anacostia River.

The old piers along the channel are to be replaced with new, stronger and more sightly piers. One of the new piers will be used for heavy commercial purposes, two others for steamboat dockings and a fourth for police and fireboats. Four yacht basins, indented from the line of the pier heads, are to be constructed above the wharves, providing space for 286 small boats and pleasure craft.

Commercial traffic for the past five years along the Potomac River in Washington has averaged 2,006,032 tons per year for an annual value of $52,862,808, according to War Department statistics.

Betty Dumbris Wed To Broker in N. Y.

Betty Dumbris, Washington girl who left Western High School to join the Ziegfeld Follies, was married at midnight Sunday to Russell John, New York broker, it was announced yesterday by the girl's mother, Mrs. Anton Dumbris, of 1308 Spring road.

When but 15 years old, Miss Dumbris won the title of "Miss Indiana" in a beauty contest in that State. After reaching the semifinals of the international beauty contest at Galveston, Tex., she was ruled out because she was less than 16, the minimum age for participants.

Miss Dumbris has appeared in every Ziegfeld production since "Whoopee." Her father is an instrument maker for the Coast and Geodetic Survey.

Spray for Paralysis Held Yet Unproven

The use of nasal spray for prevention of infantile paralysis by humans is "not at present to be regarded as of proven value," the Public Health Service said yesterday.

The service said that experimental work conducted by two of its scientists in preventing poliomyelitis in monkeys by use of a nasal spray had excited so much interest that they deemed a statement desirable. Experimentation up until now was based entirely on animals.

Early applications, the statement said, should be administered by a physician.

Capital Leads Nation In Size of HOLC Loans

Washingtonians borrowed more money per average loan than citizens of any State from the Home Owners Loan Corporation, figures released yesterday showed.

The average loan made by the HOLC since its organization in the District was $5,798, $683 more than the next best borrower, New York. A total of 2,091 loans amounting to $12,134,233 were made here.

New Jersey, third on the list, borrowed $4,825; Massachusetts, fourth, drew $4,446 and Connecticut was fifth with an average of $4,300.

Funeral Racket Costs Clerk Trip, His Family $285

Albert Hanson, G. P. O. clerk, living at 1129 New Hampshire avenue, told police it had cost him a useless trip to his home in La Verne, Minn., for the "funeral" of his brother, Leonard.

His father, Hanson said, had received a telegram from a New York undertaker saying that Leonard had died in New Rochelle, N. Y., and would he like them to ship the body? Hanson's father wired the firm $285 for services and asked his other son to come home for the funeral.

The burial plot was bought, the grave dug and the relatives gathered to await the arrival of the body. When no body came after four days, the elder Hanson wired New York police. They said no such undertaking firm existed.

The G. P. O. clerk returned to Washington and asked police here to help New York and Minnesota authorities search for his brother.

Suspect Denies Blackmail Charge

Horace W. Richardson, 21, who was indicted by the District grand jury Monday on a charge of robbery and seven charges of blackmailing the Rev. Raymond L. Wolven, canon of the Washington Cathedral, yesterday appeared before Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue in the District Supreme Court and entered a plea of not guilty.

Arrested June 4, Richardson is said to have obtained between $400 and $500 from Mr. Wolven on the threat that he would hold him up to public ridicule. Richardson, now being held in the District Jail, was represented by Attorney Richard Tedrow.

Traffic Safety On Rise in D. C., Says Van Duzer

Vast Improvement Noted for First Six Months of This Year.

Records at the Department of Vehicles and Traffic yesterday showed a marked improvement in Washington's traffic problem for the first six months of this year (ended June 30), compared with the same period in 1935.

Constant stressing of the three Es in traffic safety—enforcement, education and engineering—lowered the accident death roll from 56 fatalities last year to 45 for the first half of 1936.

At the end of June this year, a total of 4,667 accidents had been reported. This was the least encouraging of all records, showing a decrease of only 21 accidents over last year.

The number of personal injuries, however, dropped to 1,907 this year from 2,134 in 1935. Property was damaged in 2,919 accidents the first six months of this year, compared with 2,750 cases last year.

Pedestrians continued to head the list of fatalities. Inattention while crossing streets and crossing not at crosswalks were given as fatal accident causes in the majority of instances.

"During the past several months," said Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, "we have been successful in keeping our accident, injury and death toll on a downward trend. To continue this, we must have the cooperation of motorists and pedestrians alike. We are well on the way to improved conditions—and all I can do is plead with those who drive to help us to keep things that way."

Police Court Building Plan Is Approved

Will Meet Needs of D. C. for Next 100 Years, Sultan Says.

New Structure to Cost $1,500,000; Bids to Be Asked Soon.

Plans for a Police Court Building that will meet the needs of the District for the next 100 years were approved yesterday by the Commissioners.

Authorized in the 1937 District act, the structure will be erected on the west side of Judiciary Square, near Fifth street, at an ultimate cost of $1,500,000. The current appropriation act carries the initial $1,000,000. Specifications require that the building be erected within 14 months after the contract is let. Bids will be invited at once.

Instead of housing all the smaller District courts, as the courts unit of the Municipal Center would have done, the Police Court Building will be restricted to Police Court activities.

Six Courtrooms.

Six courtrooms will be provided, although there are at present only four police judges, and space will be available for adding two more when need.

"The present Police Court Building was built only 20 years ago," Lieut. Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner, said, "and 10 years later people began talking about its inadequacy. They won't be able to complain about the new Police Court Building for sometime. It's good for 100 years, at least.

The building will have three stories and a basement and will be faced with limestone to match the present United States District Court and Court of Appeals buildings. There will be four courtrooms on the first floor and two on the second. A reception room for prisoners will be in the basement.

To Start on Next Unit.

Although there are no funds in sight to finance the remainder of the development of Judiciary Square, the municipal architect's office will start drafting plans at once for the next unit, a building to house the municipal courts.

Ultimately the Commissioners hope to build another unit for the Juvenile Court to match the Court of Appeals Building. They had planned to make room in this for the office of the recorder of deeds as well, but a move was started in the last Congress to make provision for a separate building at the request of the recorder.

The suggestion has been made that the present Police Court Building be remodeled and turned over to the Metropolitan Police Department, but the Commissioners have not decide the question.

Next to his official duties of snaring public enemies J. Edgar Hoover's greatest enthusiasm is said to be the advocacy of the FBI Theater Group. Last evening at the National Sylvan Theater, Mr. Hoover had good reason to be proud of his thespian association as he watched them roll back theatrical history to the year 1464 and present in an enthusiastic manner "Pierre Patelin."

The other 9,999 who swarmed the sloping sides of the Monument Grounds, too, looked with approbation upon this delightful comedy of a "hungry but hopeful" lawyer. Apparently timeless—at least, "undated" except in sartorial mode—the play clicked with the audience just as surely as it must have done nearly 500 years ago.

Pierre Patelin, cajoles a draper into giving him six yards of cloth, but when he calls to collect for it Pierre feigns illness. Subsequently the draper's shepherd is hailed into court on a charge of killing sheep and stealing wool and he asks Pierre to defend him. He does, and when the defendant is acquitted, Pierre finds himself paid in the same coin as he paid the draper.

Leads Cavort Rousingly.

Francis Crane, in the title role, gave the scheming attorney a lusty reading, leaping about the stage in grand style yet without anything which smacked of overacting. It was just enthusiasm let loose. Yet what Mr. Crane did in his part, Vincent Kirby, as the draper, surpassed virtually tearing through the role in a way which combined all the explosive propensities of all nationalities. These two, especially in the trial scene, turned in performances the likes of which eyes have never seen before on the stage of the Sylvan Theater.

As the most goofy oaf, in looks, manner of reading and deportment, ever portrayed in local amateur or semiprofessional groups, that of William Coleman was tops. He was no less a "?" than those four yokels which stopped the Young Democrats' recent offering. He was swell.

Austin Cunningham played the judge with a sufficient forebearance and judicial austerity. Irma Barry was nice as Pierre's wife, a charming accomplice in his adventure with the draper.

The "Atmosphere."

Among the others appearing were Helen Lewis, Molly Pagan, Mary Palermo, Gladys Surratt, Ora Ward, Charles Butler, Russell Gardner, William Holland, Leonard Levenson, Herman Tickel, Ina Jacobson, Walter Kealy, Elbert Heiserman, Harding Kneeland, Charles Schildecker, David Shapiro, Thomas Council, William Patrick, Francis Buckley, Florence Malone, Grace Stinnette, Catherine Flannery, Martha Fitz-Hugh, Barbara Ammann, Clarence Crandall, Dorothy Howe, Alice McQuay, Ruth Wilson, Hilda Eyerman, William McCarthy, Fordyce Lyman, Joseph Bogan, Donald Chase, Alvin Ostholhoff, Alexander Neale, Edward Shields, Lewis Nichols and Lester Ponder.

The direction of Clarence W. Moore and Clayton A. Braathen was fine and fast, and the lighting and setting by Harold Snyder were of the best.

The comedy was preceded by an hour's concert by the Washington Gas Light Co. Employes Band, under the direction of Otto Siebeneichen. An excellent concert, well played.

Mercy Finds Its Way to the Battlefield

Scenes at Balaclava are among those which leave the deepest impression in the Warner Brothers' picturization of the story of Florence Nightingale and her fight to gain official recognition of the need of feminine nursing on the fields of battle. Above is reproduced one of the grim spectacles with which the heroic nurses were confronted when they dared the perils of the Crimea and inaugurated a new era in humanitarianism. The role of Florence Nightingale is played by Kay Francis, appearing in center above. "The White Angel," as the picture is known, opens at the Earle Theater on Friday of the present week.

Nelson B. Bell

About The Showshops

"THE WHITE ANGEL." Obviously inspired by the success of their biographical film drama of "The Story of Louis Pasteur," the sagacious occupants of the driver's seat at Warner Brothers have contrived another celluloid treatise cut from the same pattern, with the heroic life of Florence Nightingale as its basis.

BELL.

While this somber narrative may lack something of the melodramatic dynamics that fired the earlier film, it exerts a gentler, less spectacular, but no less authoritative power by reason of the gender of its pivotal character. There is a quiet dignity, a sincerity and a forcefulness in the triumphant spectacle of a frail little woman's successful struggle against the smug complacency of the rusty human machine of London's reactionary war office in the 1850's that requires no artificial impetus to make it a profoundly impressive historical document.

For the seekers after a mere superficial gloss of popular entertainment, "The White Angel," previewed yesterday afternoon, may not hold so much, but for the spectator able to grasp the mighty drama from which sprang the present-day, highly specialized profession of trained nursing for women, there are in this picture stirring conflict, romance, pathos and moments of spiritual exaltation that will linger in memory long beyond the life of any shallow, sophisticated flippancy. Added to the qualities of drama aimed at the deeper emotions are the glimpses of grim horror that stalked the battlefields when male orderlies alone tended the wounded and the dying salvaged from the firing line.

Even with all the sublimity of its subject matter and the world's reverential memory of the life and works of Florence Nightingale, there are intervals in the action of the picture when one feels that the actual event must have been more galvanizing, more moving, more electric than its studio reproduction. It might well be one of the picture's boasts, however, that it has had the courage to depict repugnant scenes with an honesty, a completeness and a realism that combine to place upon the finished product the indelible stamp of conscientious and painstaking effort on the part of all who had a hand in fashioning the story for the cameras and all those who played in it.

Admirers of Kay Francis, in the title role of this earnest film play, will discover her in a characterization unlike anything she has done heretofore. To the role of Florence Nightingale she imparts a delicacy and a valor that make it memorable.

When the time comes—and that would be Saturday morning after its Friday opening at the Earle—more detailed consideration will be accorded the cast and content of a motion picture production that deserves to be set down among the most commendable of the cinema's recent achievements.

* * * *

For reasons which it is still believed will justify themselves in course of time, this column remains practically adamant in its conviction that Maxine Doyle will be along to headline the stage bill at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater the week of July 24. What she will do in the way of entertaining the multitudes, once she gets here, is something else again. Based purely upon the memory of past performances, a random guess would be that specially arranged songs and tricky dances, running up into the high temperatures, would have something to do with it.

* * * *

Contrary to expectation and past practice, several of the most imposing of the recent film productions, which ordinarily would be held for fall and the cooler weather of the new season, will be presented on local screens during July and August.

Foremost among these, perhaps, are Marc Connelly's picturization for the Warner Brothers of his Pulitzer Prize winning stage play of "The Green Pastures," with Rex Ingram in the role of De Lawd, created by the late Richard B. Harrison, and "Anthony Adverse," Mervyn LeRoy's picturization of the Hervey Allen marathon fiction, for the same company, with Fredric March in the name part. "The Green Pastures" is at present scheduled for showing at the Earle the end of this month and "Anthony" will follow only a little later.

Following "The White Angel," and interlarded with such other major releases as Bette Davis, last year's Academy Award winner, in "Satan Met a Lady;" Pat O'Brien in both "Public Enemy's Wife" and "China Clipper" and Joe E. Brown's "Earthworm Tractors," this determination on the part of the Warner executives not to recognize any such thing as that old "summer slump" bugaboo, signalizes an entirely new point of view on the part of both producers and exhibitors.

Incidentally, it makes a very elegant monkey out of that antique "Greater Movie Season" idea that used to sprout every August in the managerial mind.

* * * *

While we are on the topic, seemingly with no immediate hope of escape, it might be just as well to remark now as any time upon the unexpected box-office popularity of two bills currently on view that were supposed by their sponsors to be "just so-so." Barbara Stanwyck, Robert Young and Gene Raymond have clicked so emphatically in "The Bride Walks Out," at RKO-Keith's, that Manager Hardie Meakin cannot in justice to himself and his opera house take it off for at least another week. Mrs. Louise Noonan Miller and her manager, Abe Tolkins, down at the Little Theater, find themselves confronted with the same happy condition—the combination of "If I Had a Million" and "Man of Aran" has proved such an inspirational choice that it also will be continued through a second week, beginning Sunday. And how have you been?

Initial Concert of Series to Be Given on July 19 at Watergate.

Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt will head the list of prominent Washington women who will be patronesses for the "Symphonies on the Potomac" at the watergate, near Lincoln Memorial, which will open for the season Sunday night, July 19, with Alfred Wallenstein as guest conductor.

The women's committee which was formed recently with Mrs. Walter Nash as its president, and Mme. L. de Sokoloff as its chairman, met Monday to plan an intensive campaign for the advance sale of the books of tickets for the concert season of 22 events.

At this meeting it was announced that other patronesses for the present season include many outstanding music lovers of the Capital, among them Mrs. Edwin Martin Watson, Mrs. George Maurice Morris, Mrs. William P. McCracken, Mrs. Joseph C. O'Mahoney, Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, Mrs. Francis Whitten, Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg and Mrs. R. Golden Donaldson.

Construction of the specially designed orchestral stage will begin at once. Technical experts in charge expect this new type of stage with sounding board will prove more effective than last season's shell.

Elsie Janis Calls New 'Madness' An 'Inspiration'

Actress Feels Plan to Aid Others Gives Her a 'Reason to Live.'

By the Associated Press.

Tarrytown, N. Y., July 7.—Elsie Janis, on whom fortune smiled through a long stage career, looked today to a new role as she resolved to dispose of her possessions and devote her life to aid the less fortunate.

"This is a divine inspiration from God," said the 47-year-old actress. "I am doing it because I want to do something swell, something that would give me a reason for living."

Miss Janis, who won fame early as an impersonator, disclosed last night she would spend much of her future in Government hospitals entertaining disabled World War veterans, many of whom knew her overseas in 1918 as the "Sweetheart of the A. E. F."

Miss Janis describes her plan as the latest example of her so-called "madness."

"Oh boy, if they thought I was nutty before," this will be the pay off," she said in a letter to the Tarrytown News.

She gave the following "examples of my so-called madness and the results:"

"1915—I was a 'nut' for giving up a great success here, 'The Lady of the Slipper,' to take a chance and make a debut in London. I loved the British, and we gambled on salary. If I made good, I got my American one. If I didn't, we got nothing. My reward was not only making a big hit and blazing a trail for Americans into the British theater, but, being there, to sing for soldiers in hospitals and camps, before America came into the war. I went to our fellows in France all ready, and knew that men who had been under fire wanted to be kidded and treated like pals, not lauded and treated like heroes.

"1917—I was a 'nut' to leave Mammon, holding that 3,500 bucks a week for nine months, while I gave as high as ten shows a day in France with no thought of reward. Result: I returned very much surprised at being called a heroine, and insisted, against all advice, on doing a show with only former service men. It made more money than any of the great hits I ever had, both for my manager and me.

"1929—After facing death in a hospital in Paris, I retired from the stage and begged 'G. H. Q.' to assure me that I was not being selfish in dodging the spotlights and adulation. Result: On the ship coming home I talked via wireless to Jesse Lasky, of Paramount, and started my new life as a writer. I was willing to start at scratch. When I reached Hollywood they had just started pictures. I was needed. I started in and supervised 'Paramount on Parade' at 1,500 bucks a week.

"1930—I had been a 'nut' for years, for not leaving my wonderful mother for some man, to save myself from being an old maid. My mother was called by 'G. H. Q.' very suddenly. Without asking for it, I was given the knowledge, as mother was leaving, that where there is real devotion there is no real parting. While others broke down, I was the only one capable of handling all details of what I called mother's 'going-away party.'

"1931—I was a 'nut' when I didn't fight to hold on to my position in films. Result: I had definite assurance, which I knew came from mother, that there was nothing in power and possessions unless they came through unselfishness and love of fellow men. I sat at peace in a little California back yard, while Mammon and his gang screamed with rage.

"1932—I let them 'get me' enough to come back East and make thousands on the radio. Because 'I had so much to give,' said Mammon. 'Give' is good—at $3,000 a week. Result: I lost all of it in the failure of the Beverly Hills Bank. I wasn't even sore. I said: 'You see, I wasn't supposed to have it. I've had too much already in life.'

"1932—I had asked for a helpmeet who would understand me. He came and was young enough to be as inexperienced in the fundamentals of mating as old maid Janis was at 42. Result: Four years of two being one completely, and now an understanding of what is what. He is young enough to make a new life for himself, if orders are such. Imagine trying to explain this new life I'm entering to any guy my own age.

"1936—'Oh boy.' If they thought it was 'nutty' before, this will be the pay-off, when they see that I know it can't be done half-way. I can't sit comfortably on my plush pillows and tell others what to do to be happy, but I will be able to tell anyone anything, when I am able to meet them, eye to eye, on an equal footing wherever they stand. In case you think I'm trying to tee up on my bean, this is Elsie. I just want to be happy, and I'm going to be, as soon as I can do everything that I want to do without some one thinking. 'I wonder what she gets for doing that?'"

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky.

Hollywood, July 7.

Alice Faye, Gregory Ratoff, Ted Healy and Patsy Kelly are playing a scene in a theatrical office for the flicker, "Sing, Baby, Sing." In this office, as there is supposed to be in all theatrical offices, there is a couch, and Alice Faye is lying upon the couch. Very pretty, too. Nothing really happened, but it was worthwhile seeing. Miss Faye merely relaxed on the couch as the dialogue spouted about her.

ALICE FAYE.

Ted Healy has more stooges on the set, writing gags for him, than he had on the stage. The scenario is there, and Director Lanfield is shooting the script, but Healy is writing his part as he goes along. Before each scene a stooge rushes to Healy with a gag, and Healy races to Director Lanfield and shouts: "I've got something funny. Just got the idea. They'll howl at this. Listen. You're the camera . . ." and Healy enacts his gag.

But regardless of Healy's jokes, Alice Faye, relaxing on that couch, could take the scene if she felt so inclined.

There is much activity on the set of "Dodsworth," which is a large reproduction of the Queen Mary. There are many invited visitors on the set: Merle Oberon, David Niven, a group of important English business men, and officials from a steamship line. They are gathered for the launching of the Queen Mary. This is not a scene for the flicker, and the camera is not turning, it is merely a little set party. Ruth Chatterton takes a bottle of champagne and breaks it across the Queen Mary, and the prop boat is launched. Now the filming of the picture can proceed. Thats' why I like the movies.

Freddie Bartholomew, Jackie Cooper and Mickey Rooney are waiting on the set to play a scene in "The Devil Is a Sissy." The setting is the tough youngsters' hideout, the junk yard. They are to make the mild Freddie a member of the gang.

These youngsters are like Robert Taylor, Cesar Romero and William Powell in one way: Their girl friends come to visit them on the set, talk, and watch them work. Judy Garland is there to see Jackie Cooper. Mickey Rooney is all excted about his gal friend, Diane Louis.

The boys start playing a football game while waiting. Rooney and Cooper are on one team against Bartholomew and a group of rough looking kids. They have been pushing each other around when Director Rowland Brown says: "Break it up, boys. I don't want any of you to get hurt. I need you for this picture."

Wirephoto Records Highlights as National League All-Stars Defeated American League

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Boston, July 7.

Strong hints emanating from National League headquarters had dinned into the ears of Manager Charlie Grimm that it would be well for him to place a winning ball team on the field this afternoon. Beaten three years hand-running by the All-Star American Leaguers, the National League big shots let it be known to Mr. Grimm that a victory today was most important.

POVICH.

They gave him the office to win the ball game, and that, apparently, was all that Mr. Grimm needed. With a fine disregard for the fans' choices, he placed on the field a team comprised almost exclusively of his Cubs and the league-leading Cardinals. If the fans wanted a player from each club on his team, that was one thing, but if the National League really wanted to win the ball game, that was quite another, and Mr. Grimm has been a National League employe for 20 years now.

So, there were eight Cubs and Cardinals in the line-up when the first ball was pitched by Dizzy Dean this afternoon. One member of the two teams was at every post except third base, where Pinkey Whitney, of the Phillies, was holding forth for Grimm. The American League could place a representative club on the field if it wished, but Mr. Grimm was chiefly occupied with winning the ball game.

Overconfident, perhaps, in the light of their three successive All-Star victories, the American Leaguers deliberately made a show of their talent. Manager Joe McCarthy sent 17 of his 26 players into the game, giving every club in the league except the Browns representation. Not so Manager Grimm.

If a victory was what his bosses wanted, then that was what Mr. Grimm was out to produce, even if he had to put an entire line-up of Cubs or Cardinals on the field. He used only 13 players during the game, and the Pirates, Braves and Dodgers didn't get representation at any time during the nine innings.

But there can be no quarrel with his tactics. They worked. The American Leaguers may not have weakened themselves by pressing into service players from seven clubs—I don't think that they did—but Grimm was taking no chances today. One more defeat for the National League and the fans of the Nation might have hung a minor league stigma on 'em before the night was through.

That ball game today was a swell argument for the effectiveness of good pitching against good hitting. It ought to settle a lot of debate. That .334 hitting line-up of the American Leaguers was a pushover for Dizzy Dean and Carl Hubbell in those first six innings. It was a great test of swell pitchers vs. swell hitters.

They got only two hits, one a wilting single, off Hubbell in those first six frames. The two National League mound aces were the perfect antidote for the poison in the bats wielded by such as Luke Appling, Charlie Gehringer, Joe DiMaggio, Lou Gehrig, Earl Averill, Bill Dickey and Rip Radcliff.

That Dean, flinging his foot high in the face of the batter in his windup, had a perfect mixture of deliveries. He had a fast ball that steamed and he had a fast curve that broke half a foot. And he didn't have to sacrifice control when he flung either. Those fellows who were not used to batting against Dean were helpless.

But Hubbell was hardly less effective. Any big leaguer will tell you that he'd rather face any other pitcher for the first time than this guy Hubbell. He'll throw you a curve that breaks away from you and with the same motion he'll throw you a screw ball that breaks toward you. The hitter up there against Hubbell is eternally guessing despite what native hitting talents he may have and anybody'll tell you that a guess hitter isn't worth his salt against good pitching.

All-Star Dust.

Joe DiMaggio got an even break for the day . . . He evoked the loudest applause at the start and the loudest groans before the game was over . . . Only the scorer's generosity permitted him to escape with one error instead of two . . . Manager Joe McCarthy would entrust the catching only to Rick Ferrell when the temperamental Lefty Grove was on the mound . . . Rip Radcliff, undisputedly the worst fielder in either team's outfield, came up with the best outfield play of the game when he sprinted over to the foul line for Medwick's line drive in the third . . . The best infield play belonged to Pinkey Higgins, who found Demaree's scorching grounder in his glove and turned it into a double play in the fifth when the National Leaguers had two on and one out . . . That Dizzy Dean was a very happy fellow when he picked Lou Gehrig off first base in the second inning with a snap throw . . . so pleased with himself that he grinned at Gehrig and all of the 25,534 fans . . . Lon Warneke gained a big put-out in the ninth when he struck out Pinch-Hitter Frank Crosetti after the count stood at three balls, no strikes . . . Di Maggio personally left six American Leaguers on base when he went hitless . . . The National Leaguers weren't long in testing out Jimmy Foxx when the latter replaced Higgins at third base in the seventh . . . Medwick bunted and to his dismay saw Foxx throw him out as if he were a third baseman all his life.

Sarron Flattens Bobby Dean In Fifth

By Bill McCormick.

Featherweight titleholder Pete Sarron proved to the world—or the 2,000 inhabitants of it who were present—that he had every right to be called "champion" by knocking out Bobby Dean in the fifth round of a feature bout scheduled for 10 rounds at Griffith Stadium last night.

Despite the knockout, which came after only 40 seconds of milling in the fifth; despite five knockdowns of Deans which preceded it, the contest was hard-fought throughout and might have ended with either man the winner up to the time Sarron finally floored the featherweight champion of Pennsylvania for keeps with a crushing right to the jaw.

Anybody's Fight.

Propelled to the canvas for a five-count by a short left hook to the chin in the first round, Dean snapped back in the second almost to score Washington's biggest upset. Pinning Pedro on the ropes, Bobby shot home a left to the head which made Sarron's eyes bulge. He shot another, then another—and Sarron adherents began offering silent thanks that the contest was an overweight affair.

Sarron fought cautiously in the third round, but ripped into the Philadelphia southpaw with a barrage of body punches at the bell for the fourth. The barrage sent Dean to the floor for no count. He rose to unleash one of the most furious two-fisted attacks ever seen in a local ring. As they stood toe-to-toe, the eventual loser shook the title-holder with several hard lefts to the jaw, but the bell ended the furious activity.

In his corner, the champion's seconds cautioned Sarron that he was setting too fast a pace, would

Olympic Unit Gets $10,000 Donation

By the United Press.

New York, July 7.—The American Olympic committee has received $10,000 in cash and promises of $10,000 more since Sunday, Treasurer Gustavus T. Kirby announced tonight.

When the promised $10,000 arrives, the fund-raising deficit will be pared to $133,000. On Sunday Kirby announced that the campaign to raise $227,000 to defray expenses for sending the American Olympic team to Berlin was $153,000 short of its goal."

Lost 3 Dozen Oranges On Red Sox, One by One

Malden, Alberta, July 7 (AP).—Nick Barzelay, young printer's devil and a Boston Red Sox fan, paid off more than three dozen oranges in one-orange bets as his team lost game after game. Finally he wrote Tom Yawkey, owner of the Red Sox. Back came a crate of oranges.

Coy's Widow Is Found Working as Domestic

By the United Press.

Oklahoma City, July 7.—The widow of E. H. (Ted) Coy, Yale's football immortal, was discovered here today working as a domestic to eat and keep a roof over her head.

The discovery came after she visited a little pawnshop. There she pawned a wedding ring set in emeralds, a gold medallion, a gold football and a Skull and Bones badge, to buy food.

The jewelry was engraved, "E. H. Coy—Yale U."

The pawnbroker examined the articles and made an offer, which was accepted. He ventured:

"Could it be Ted Coy, the Yale athlete?"

These were, she admitted, the trinkets of Coy, twice all-America and picked by Walter Camp for the all-time football team.

The pawnbroker, Phillip Rubins, wrote to the Skull and Bones Society of Yale, asking if it cared to buy the things which had belonged to Coy. An answering telegram asked him to send the jewelry.

Supporting Self.

Now the widow is supporting herself as a domestic. She answered the doorbell when a reporter called at a modest home here. Drying her hands, wet from kitchen work, she answered a question readily:

"Yes, I'm Mrs. Ted Coy. How on earth did you find me here?"

She came here in January, she said, to visit a brother, who later was transferred to another city.

"I haven't any money," she said. "That's the Simon simple answer to this."

"Once I went five days in this town without a bite to eat. For heaven's sake don't write a sob story. Oh, I'd read of a lot of things like that, but it was the first time I ever knew it was true—you know how it is when you're sort of well off, things like that never seem true."

Sense of Humor.

Half laughing, half sobbing, she went on:

"I thank God for a sense of humor. If I didn't have it I'd have been bad off these months since Ted died."

It was on September 8 last year that Coy died in a New York hospital. Mrs. Coy was in California visiting a sister. She flew to New York, but death beat her there.

Coy was married three times. He and the first wife, Sophie Meldrim, of Savannah, Ga., were divorced in Paris in 1925. The best known of his wives was Jeanne Eagles, ill-fated star of the stage. After three years they were divorced in 1928.

Three weeks later, Coy married Lottie Bruhn, of El Paso, Tex., the young woman now making her own way here.

Welsh Moves Up In New Jersey Net Play

By the Associated Press.

Spring Lake, N. J., July 7.—Bernard F. Welsh of Rockville, Md., holder of the Middle States, New England, West Virginia, National Public Works and District of Columbia championships, was among the seeded players advancing in the opening day's play of the Spring Lake invitation tennis tournament here today. Welsh, seeded No. 4, defeated Harold Folks of Austin, Texas, 6—1, 6—4.

Frankie Parker, of the Host Club, opened defense of his title by sweeping aside Jack Del Valle of Hollywood, Calif., aside, 6—0, 6—0. Robert Riggs, seeded No. 2 under the top-seeded Parker, turned back J. P. Stockton, 6—3, 6—4. Two of the selected eight won their way to the third round, namely, J. Gilbert Hall, South Orange, N. J., seeded No. 3, and Herb Bowman, New York campaigner seeded No. 7.

Among the survivors was Hugh J. Lynch of Washington, D. C., who defeated H. H. Braubach, San Antonio, Tex., 6—1, 6—1. Wayne Sabin, doubles partner of Riggs, was extended in the opening round, winning from George S. Dickinson, jr., of Tarrytown, N. Y., 14—12, 6—3. Sabin is seeded fifth.

Gardner Mulloy of Miami, Fla., seeded No. 7, was forced to three sets before eliminating T. G. Benton, Orange, N. J., 7—1, 5—7, 6—0.

Tom Markey, Washington, D. C., lawyer, gained the third round by defeating Peter Lauck, of Montclair, N. J., 6—2, 6—4, in a second-round encounter.

Rain Delays Try To Set Speed Mark

By the Associated Press.

Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah, July 7.—Rain today interrupted Capt. George Eyston's planned assault upon all existing motor car speed records from 100 miles up.

A sudden squall whipped across the flats and he was forced to postpone his scheduled start until 7 p. m., Pacific standard time (10 p. m. Eastern standard time).

Wind which reached a velocity of 40 miles an hour ripped at the tiny cluster of tents pitched near the 10-mile circular course. The big tent over the taciturn Briton's main pit was blown down.

Gehrig's Homer His First Hit In Series

Poles 404 Foot Drive; Joe DiMaggio Muffs Two Chances.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 7.—Booes from the right-field bleachers rang in Joe Di Maggio's ears today for the first time in his big league career. The sensational Yankee rookie outfielder not only appeared to have a bad case of all-star jitters, to the crowd's as well as the American League's intense disappointment, but he was luckless even in the one instance where he tried hardest to come through.

That was in the seventh, where, with the bases full, Joe took a toehold on one of Lon Warneke's fast balls and smashed it on a line to Leo Durocher's hand. A foot or two either way and it would have been a base hit, scoring two runs, and reversing the outcome of the ball game. Cheers mingled with the jeers when Di Maggio came to bat for the last time in the ninth, but again Joe failed, popping into the last out with the tying run on second base.

Di Maggio had only three chances in the field and missed two of them.

Lou Gehrig made his first hit in four All-Star games the gaudiest of the day, a home-run wallop that sailed high into the rightfield bleacher section known as the "jury box." The ball traveled well beyond the 404-foot mark. Yankee Lou was robbed of a single by Rip Collins in the fourth. The Cardinal first sacker made a diving stop of Gehrig's hot smash and tossed to Hubbell for the put out.

Senator Will Pay Girls' Olympic Fare

New York, July 7 (AP).—The American Olympic women's track and field squad was increased to five members today with the announcement by the Olympic committee that a $500 fund to finance the expenses of Kathlyn Kelley, 16-year-old Greenville, S. C., high jumper, has been assured by State Senator Harry I. Hughs.

National Loop Stars Beat American Foes For First Time, 4 to 3

By Shirley Povich.

Sports Editor of The Post.

Braves Field, Boston, Mass., July 7.—Three long years under the heel of the American League All-Stars came to an end for the National League this afternoon.

Wavering but dogged, in those last trying innings, the National League entry clung to a melting lead, won the ball game by the exceedingly squeamish score of 4 to 3, and came up with its first triumph in the four-year history of All-Star play.

From Lefty Grove and Schoolboy Rowe they wrung the runs that lifted them to victory, two at a time in the second and fifth innings, but thereafter the National Leaguers were compelled to fight off an unbroken succession of American League threats.

But the blame for the American Leaguers' defeat centered less in the failures of Grove and Rowe than in the failure of the freshman star of the Yankees, Joe DiMaggio. For DiMaggio, his first All-Star game, was an almost hideous experience.

Crowd Is Small.

Premature reports of a sell-out resulted in the smallest crowd in All-Star history. Impressed by reports that seats were at a premium, Boston fans stayed away from the park in great numbers and gapping empty spaces in the stands were a part of the All-Star scene. Before the 25,534 fans who saw the game DiMaggio was a colossal flop.

The poor kid didn't get any of the seven hits that Dizzy Dean, Carl Hubbell, Curt Davis and Leon Warneke parceled out to the American Leaguers. Three times he had chances to drive in runs, twice a hit from his bat would have won the ball game, and it was his weak pop-up after Charley Gehringer's double in the ninth that sealed his teams' sat fate. But it was in the field that DiMaggio went completely sour.

His shoddy play of Gabby Hartnett's line drive in the second inning figured in two National League runs despite the fact that the play was scored as a triple for the barrel-waisted Cubs catcher and it was DiMaggio's error, the lone error of the game, on a single by Herman in the fifth that helped the enemy to its winning run.

Galan, Gehrig Hit Homers.

Giving the lie to the loftier batting averages that the American Leaguers carried into the game, the Natoinal League entry, composed chiefly of Cubs and Cardinals, outslugged their foes, with nine hits off Grove, Rowe and Mel Harder.

It was a swell ball game. Augie Galan, dimunitive Cub outfielder, fortified the National League's 2-0 lead in the fifth inning with a home run against the right field flag pole, and Lou Gehrig led the counter-threat of the American Leaguers with a booming home run into the distant left field bleachers in the seventh.

That blow, the hardest wallop of the game, sounded the charge of the American Leaguers. They knocked Davis, of the Cubs, out of the box and collected three runs, but were still one shy of tying the score when Warneke called a halt to the uprising.

Given the office by National League chiefs to win the ball game almost at any cost and thus salvage diminishing National League prestige, Manager Charlie Grimm, placed on the field at the start of proceedings a ball team comprised almost exclusively of the League-leading Cardinals and second place Cubs. Pinky Whitney, third baseman of the Phillies was the only player to wear another uniform.

Ben Chapman Fails To Distinguish Self In All-Star Battle

By a Staff Correspondent.

Boston, July 7.—Outfielder Ben Chapman, Washington's lone entry in the American League All-Star line-up, failed to distinguish himself in his brief appearance in today's game.

Chapman relieved Earl Averill in centerfield when the National Leaguers went to bat in the seventh inning. He didn't have a chance in the outfield, and in his one turn at bat, in the eighth, failed to get on base.

The sign to bunt was given Chapman in the eighth when Gehrig led off with a walk that represented the tying run. Chapman failed to bunt twice, but on his third swing he drove a sharp grounder down the third-base line that Riggs was barely able to knock down. Chapman was thrown out by a step at first base, but Gehrig advanced to second.

Decided to be Champion—and Is

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 7.—Glenn Morris believes in futures born on the spur of the moment.

The 23-year-old Simla, Colo., superman—the world's jack-of-all-trades in track and field competition—watched Jarring Jim Bausch establish a new world and Olympic decathlon record in the 1932 games at Los Angeles. He was only a spectator; an obscure one, at that.

"Heck," he mused, "I can do all of those things and most of them better, too."

That was the beginning. He needed no outside urging. In fact, nobody else knew of his intention. He first came to the fore in 1934 when he won the national A. A. U. junior 40-meters hurdling title.

It was the best showing he ever made in a national championship until ten days ago when he won the A. A. U. decathlon in world record figures and the right to be Uncle Sam's No. 1 man in the ten-event program at Berlin next month.

He stands 6 feet 1 inch; is muscled like a lumberman and weighs around 185 pounds. His frame resembles Big Bill Tilden's although somewhat heavier. A graduate of Colorado State College and now a Fort Collins, Colo., auto salesman, Morris is a personable young man, but very, very modest and blushes at the slightest provocation.

The all-around star is working out daily on neighborhood tracks, completing his preparation before sailing with the Olympic team in the liner Manhattan July 15. Unlike most other team candidates, his qualifying test is over.

Morris admitted, under some pressure, that he wasn't at his best in the hurdles when he amassed 7,800 points to better the German Hans Sievert's world record. It annoyed him no little because that's usually his best event.

While he's polishing up on the hurdles, he's also concentrating on the pole vault, which apparently is his one weakness. Thus far his forte has been the 100 meters, which he has run in 10.6 seconds.

He's done it all practically alone. Brutus Hamilton has given him some advice. One of his regrets is that he's never met Jim Bausch. Another is that Sievert may not compete in the Olympics because of injuries.

Miss Tiptoe Triumphs in Feature Event at Charles Town Track

Victor Worth Mutuel of $12.80

4,000 Spectators Watch Day's Program at W. Virginia Track.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Charlestown, W. Va., July 7.—Miss Tiptoe was on her toes today. Sent postward by Trainer J. Bowes Bond and capably ridden by Jockey J. Hernandez, the daughter of Cantor came from last to defeat a field of seven others in the Hillsboro Purse, the day's feature. It was to the tune of a $12.80 mutuel that she led Tell It to the finish line. The latter held the same margin over Blind Talk.

While Miss Tiptoe probably was best in the field, she repeatedly fouled Tell It on the swing to the stretch. The ultimate winner lugged in on Tell It, the favorite, and Jockey Eddie Smith was forced to pull up once. Smith, however, did not claim a foul.

The day was another ideal one here in the mountains, with plenty of sunshine and a cool breeze. A crowd in the neighborhood of 4,500 witnessed the program and betting was about normal.

The daily-double market was well off today. After Nora's Grace won the second race, Miss Lulu stepped down in the third race. The twin wager rewarded with a $33.20 payoff.

Tell It did the expected when the starting bell came. He hustled to the front and saved a world of ground at the first turn. In contrast, Miss Tiptoe was away last. However, Hernandez sent her around the field like a wild horse to reach contention. Along the backstretch, she fairly ate up the ground. At the far turn she hooked up with Tell It.

The two ran as a team for a few yards before Miss Tiptoe stuck her neck in front. It was then that she bore in on Tell It. Smith tried frantically to bring Tell It through on the rail, but each time his head stuck Miss Tiptoe's neck.

MISS NORBY	(Hiller)	114	2	5	6h	6½	7h	21.40

Two-dollar mutuels paid—VERITAS, $3.80, $2.60, $2.60; DORAMELIA, $3.80, $3.00; ABITIBI, $4.00.

VERITAS, rushed into contention at once, went up on the inside to race head and head with DORAMELIA to the stretch turn, drew out and held away thereafter. DORAMELIA, quick to begin, raced on the outside of VERITAS and continued gamely to the end. ABITIBI broke slowly, dropped back and came with a rush in the late stretch. TULEYRIES STAR lacked speed to keep up in the opening furlong, saved ground at the turns and tired slightly in the final sixteenth. FALMOUTH BELLE showed an even effort. The others were outrun.

SECOND RACE—About 5 furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates for all but Lady Dunlin. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:03. Off at 3:06. Winner, Mrs. D. T. Domer's b. m. (8), by Lancados—Nora Daidy. Trained by W. Grater. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:01 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NORAS GRACE, $5.60, $3.20, $2.60; NAHALLAC, $3.20, $2.60; LADY DUNLIN, $3.40.

NORAS GRACE, saving ground while closest in pursuit of NAHALLAC, was steered to the outside entering the stretch and gradually wore down the pacemaker. NAHALLAC, rushed to the front at once, saved ground at the turns, but could not resist the winner while vigorously handled. LADY DUNLIN, virtually left at the post and a distant trailer in the opening furlong, came with a belated rush through the stretch and probably was best. MAINS WANDER went forwardly all the way and showed a good effort. JUSTA CANTER raced in a pocket most of the way. GEE SHARP tired.

THIRD RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. The College Creek. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:34. Off at 3:36. Winner, Jewell Brothers' br. f. (3), by Prince Pal—Salvation Lass. Trained by E. Louden. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $50; fourth, $10. Time, 0:50 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS LULU, $7.00, $3.60, $2.60; CANTIDE, $3.60, $2.60; SHAGGY ANN, $2.60.

MISS LULU, partially blocked at the break, was tiptoed through on the inside to take command going into the far turn and easily worked her way clear of CANTIDE entering the stretch and was running easily at the end. CANTIDE, hard ridden throughout, continued willingly when displaced, but could not match the winner. SHAGGY ANN raced in close quarters at the far turn, but tired slightly. THEIR FIRST closed well. MARY E. off poorly, went to the leaders with a bold rush and then tired.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $33.20.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS FERN, $10.80, $5.60, $3.00; RED RIOT, $6.60, $3.60; DARLING PAT, $3.00.

MISS FERN, within striking distance of the leaders from the start, circled the front runners entering the stretch and withstood a long drive to hold RED RIOT safe. The latter pressed the pace of DARLING PAT to the stretch, took a brief lead but could not resist the winner. DARLING PAT had to be rushed to get to the front and faltered in the final sixteenth. MONOCACY closed some ground in the late stages.

FIFTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $300; claiming. The Dahlgren Hall. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:40. Off at 4:43. CASTLE CLIFF closed full of run, LANDSMAN faltered after chasing the pacemaker. CHISEL came willingly at the end. ROCKSON was through early and pulled up sore.

SIXTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. The Hillsboro. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:10½. Off at 5:11½. Winner, M. S. U. S. Olympic Baseball Team Swamps Quantico Marines, 15-2

Squad of 20 Will Go to Germany

Leslie Mann, Former Big League Star, Directing Team.

By John R. Vosburgh.

Griffith Stadium looked like a national convention of ball players yesterday, but on closer investigation it proved to be a final tryout for the United States Olympic baseball team, now quartered in Baltimore.

According to their uniforms, the boys hailed anywhere from Maine to California, but they looked as though they had been playing together for years as they thumped the Quantico Marines with a 15-to-2 beating.

After the ball game was over, Manager Les Munn, the former big-league outfielder, named most of the line-up which will make the trip to Berlin. He also disclosed a telegram from Ford Frick, president of the National League. The telegram read:

"National League votes $500 to send umpire to Olympics. Ford Frick."

This made Mr. Mann feel even more jubilant than usual. All that remains now to make the first Olympic baseball venture a rousing success is to have the American League vote to do the same thing. Manager Mann wants both leagues represented on the trip.

It is costing $13,000 to send about 20 amateur stars to Berlin, Mann explained. All the money was raised by officials of his American Baseball Congress, who secured contributions from chambers of commerce, benefit ball games, Kiwanis clubs, Rotary clubs and interested individuals. In most cases, the community's fund sent its own particular player, which costs about $660.

A famous cereal company sent an amateur team of Mann's to Japan last year as an advertisement. It would send this team to the Olympics, he said, but A. A. U. rulings prohibit such aid in an Olympic year. The objective is to pave the way to Olympic baseball in 1940 by having the American teams demonstrate it before 50 nations at Berlin.

Mann also predicted the formation of an International Baseball Congress at Berlin. The following 17 countries have corresponded with him concerning the congress and will have delegates at Berlin to perfect the coming world baseball union: Canada, Cuba, Salvador, Panama, Colombia, Japan, Philippines, New Zealand, Australia, Tunis and Algiers, England, France, Germany, Italy, Spain, Holland, Belgium, Russia and Czechoslovakia. China, which has a stadium at Shanghai seating 40,000 fans, will join, but will not be represented at Berlin.

Getting back to the line-up, here are the players Mann says will make the trip across the Rhine:

Pitchers—Bill Sayles, University of Oregon; Fred Herringer, Stanford University.

Catcher—Harold Goldberg, Brooklyn City College.

Second basemen—Les McNeece, Lauderdale, Fla.; Gordon Galvin, Coe College, Iowa.

Outfielders—Emmett Fore, University of Texas; Clarence Keegan, University of Maine; Ren Hibbard, Michigan State Teachers College; Richard Hanna, San Francisco.

Olympic Team Sails.

Rio de Janeiro, July 7 (AP).—A squad of 35 athletes comprising six trackmen, 22 oarsmen and seven swimmers sailed today for Germany to represent Brazil in the Olympic games. The swimmers included the 16-year-old girl star, Piedade Coutinho, who is entered in the 400-meter free style.

tire out before the scheduled distance.

"I can lick any man in the ring tonight," Sarron insisted. "I feel better than I ever felt before and no pace is too fast. I feel like punnching, and I'll prove that I can punch in this round. Watch me stop this guy."

With those words, Sarron bounded from his corner. He charged into Dean with a two-fisted attack from which emerged a terrific right to the chin. Dean sat down, but was up before Referee Denny Hughes could begin the count.

Sarron charged again—and once more parked a right on Bobby's jaw. Once again Dean dropped—this time for a nine count. He rose once more to be dropped for another toll of nine by a similar wallop. Then Pete landed one more right to the jaw—and Hughes could have counted 3,268, instead of the usual 10.

The champion weighed 130¼, Dean 127.

Jackie Carter, crowd-pleasing little California lightweight, won a unanimous decision from Joe Green, of Washington, in a fast and furious six-round preliminary. Jackie set Joseph down for the first count of his career in the third round. It was a nine count and Green never completely recovered from it.

Mickey Page, a Rhode Island welterweight made his local debut by holding Ritchie Mack, of Texas, to a six-round draw. The bout was a case of experience vs. punch, with Mack's ringmanship balancing Page's wallop throughout.

Helen Dettweiler Decides to Take Golf Tour With Babe Didrikson Instead of a Degree

By Dave Herman.

Helen Dettweiler, 21-year-old Congressional Country Club blonde, whose rise to local golf stardom, has been meteoric, had to choose between two things yesterday—golf or a college education.

For one brief minute yesterday it appeared Helen's plans for a Coast-to-Coast, Australian and Canadian tour with the famous woman professional, Babe Didrikson, would be shattered, but the young lady's dad came to her rescue.

The executive secretary of the U. S. G. A. said that her status would be questioned if the 22-year-old professional paid Miss Dettweiler's expenses.

It was almost time to leave for Wilmington, Del., where Miss Didrikson will play in an exhibition match. Helen's clubs, suitcases were in the car. She was a disappointed young lady, and so was the Babe. She was almost in tears in fact.

HELEN DETTWEILER.

Then it was that Dr. W. E. Dettweiler, Helen's father, who has played a prominent part in fashioning the golf career of both Helen and her kid brother, Billy, stepped into the picture.

"Do you want to go to college or make the trip?" he asked his athletic daughter.

At approximately 10 o'clock in the morning Helen Dettweiler and Babe Didrikson left Washington.

Helen had planned to matriculate at Wellesley (Mass.) College this fall. That's out. She had hoped to play in the National Women's Championship in New York. That seems to be out.

She wants to be a golf star like Glenna Collett Vare, five times national champion; Virginia Van Wie and Helen Hicks. The trip with the Babe will be just the thing to temper her competitive spirit and give her the mellowing experience, she said.

Miss Dettweiler's magic carpet will carry her to Hollywood, where in the fall she will watch Miss Didrikson make a series of movie shorts. There in the land of make-believe she hopes to play golf with Bing Crosby, Dick Arlen, Guy Kibbee and film stars who are topnotch golfers.

National All-Stars Win, 4-3

innings when they held the American Leaguers scoreless with two hits.

Dean, who received credit for pitching the victory, was the perfect pitcher. He allowed not a single American League hit nor an American League run in the three innings he worked, pitching to only nine batters. Only two reached base against Hubbell, who allowed two hits.

The Cub's Frank Demarre sounded the tocsin for the National Leaguers when he opened the second inning with a clean single to left against Grove. Then it was that the Cubs' Hartnett rifled a line drive into rightfield that DiMaggio permitted to roll through his legs to the fence for a three-base hit.

It was 2-0 in favor of the National League when Whitney drove a long fly to Averill. Those other two National League runs were produced in the fifth—one very simply when the Cubs' Galan bounced one of Rowe's pitches against the rightfield flag pole and saw it ruled a home run. The stage was set for the other when the Cubs' Herman singled to right and raced to second while DiMaggio kicked the ball around for an error.

The Cardinals' Ducky Medwick slammed a single to center to score Herman after Rowe had pitched a walk to Rip Collins.

Those first six innings were a succession of frustrations for the American Leaguers. With Appling on base by a walk in the first, DiMaggio grounded to Whitney for a double play, and after Gehrig had drawn a walk to start the second, Dizzy Dean cleanly picked him off first with a snap throw and laughed in his face.

A single by Charley Gehringer in the fourth and another by Rip Radcliffe in the fifth stood as the American Leaguers' only two hits when the seventh inning arrived. But then the native power in the American Leaguers bats started to explode.

Gehrig, hitless throughout the history of All Star games, greeted Curt Davis with the tremendous home run into the rightfield seats. Earl Averill and Bill Dickey went out on ground balls, but Goose Goslin, a money player if there ever was one, pinch-hit for Averill and got a sizzling single off Herman's glove.

Jimmy Foxx, the Native Son who pinch-hit for Frankie Higgins all but knocked little Leo Durocher down with a hot-shot single through short, and the American Leaguers' charge was on in full cry.

The Yankees' George Selkirk was Manager McCarthy's choice to bat for Rowe and the bases were filled when he drew a walk. At this point the White Sox's Luke Appling blasted a single to rightfield that Selkirk was barely able to hurdle and Goslin and Foxx clattered across the plate with the runs that reduced the score to 4-3.

DiMaggio Fails.

That blow knocked Davis from the box and the star of his Cub pitching staff, Lon Warnecke, was Manager Grimm's next pitching choice. Warneke immediately filled the bases again by Walking Gehringer.

Here was DiMaggio's chance for redemption. And for a split second he appeared to be a hero. But the crack of bat was followed by the echo of his line drive into Short Stop Durocher's glove, and the National Leaguers were safely through the inning. It was a well-tagged ball that DiMaggio hit, but today was not to be his day.

With Cleveland's Mel Harder holding the National Leaguers in check in those last two innings, the American League fought back valiantly. They got the tying run on base with none out in the eighth after Warnecke walked Gehrig, but Ben Chapman and Dickey could produce only infield outs and Goslin was walked.

Gehrig, representing the tying run, had reached third, and with Foxx at bat the possibilities were intriguing, but Warneke calmly slipped a third strike past the Boston slugger and again the National Leaguers had fought off a threat.

Warneke emerged nicely from the ninth. He struck out Pinch Hitter Frank Crosetti and disposed of Appling on a ground ball. But Charley Gehringer, the only American League to get two hits today, bashed a double to left that the put the tynig run on base and the issue squarely up to DiMaggio once more.

A pop fly from DiMaggio's bat and a moan from the American League supporters went up in unison. Second Baseman Billy Herman clutched the ball out of the air, stuck it in his pocket. DiMaggio had failed again and the ball game belonged to the National League.

Middle Atlantic Golf Tourney Postponed

Date Conflicted With Bedford Springs; New Plans Made.

The Middle Atlantic P. G. A. match play championship, scheduled to start next Monday at Rolling Road Golf Club, Catonsville, Md., has been postponed, due to a conflict in dates with the Bedford Springs (Pa.) Open.

Alex Taylor, of Rolling Road, president of the Middle Atlantic P. G. A., announced the postponement last night after conferring with Baltimore and local professionals.

The Bedford Springs event, long a magnet for Washington's professional and amateur stars, will be played Sunday and Monday, with a pro-amateur on the former day, a 36-hole pro championship on the latter day. Ray Mangrum, the "human one iron" from Dayton, Ohio, was the winner last season.

Taylor said the P. G. A. tournament, in which George Diffenbaugh, of Indian Spring, was the runner-up in 1935 to Johnny Bass, formerly of Baltimore, now of Hampton, Va., might be played either next week or the following week. It is a three-day tournament.

Some $250 in prizes will be awarded at Bedford. Walter Loeffler, club professional, is receiving entries. Al Treder, Bob Barnett, Roland Mackenzie, Leo Walper, Mel Shorey, Cliff Spencer, Walter Cunningham, Al Jamison Tony Sylvester are among the local pros who will compete.

Swift Tumble Wipes Out New High for Wheat

Canadian Rains Start 6-Cent Drop After 4½-Cent Rise.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 7.—In hectic price changes rarely equaled, wheat today jumped 4½ cents to topmost levels since 1934, smashed downward virtually 6 cents, and rebounded a cent.

Late reports of unexpected sudden moisture in Saskatchewan Province, Canada, notably around Regina, furnishing at least some relief from drought, led to a general selling rush just before wheat trading needed. As a result, all of today's sweeping gains of wheat prices that climaxed 25 cents since the beginning of June were more than wiped out with breath-taking speed. Rallies that ensued from a fresh wave of buying just at the close failed at least for the time being to overcome in full the effect of today's collapse.

Wheat closed excited, ⅛-¾ under yesterday's finish, July 1.05⅝-¾, September 1.05¾-1.06, December 1.06⅞-1.07⅛, corn 2⅝-2⅞ up, July 78¾, September 77¾-⅞, December 73½-¾, oats at ⅛ decline to ⅝ gain, September 37½-¾, and rye ⅞-1⅝ down, September 71½-⅞. The outcome in provisions ranged from 20 cents setback to 15 cents advance.

Week's Failures Lowest in 16 Years

New York, July 7 (AP).—The number of business failures in the United States for the week ended July 2 totaled 162, the lowest since the fall of 1920, according to Dun & Bradstreet.

The total compares with 165 in the preceding week, the previous low mark, and 188 in the same period a year ago.

Daily Oil Output Takes Big Drop

Tulsa, Okla., July 7 (AP).—A decrease of 76,688 barrels daily in the Nation's crude oil production, the largest in many weeks, was reported today by the Oil and Gas Journal for the week ended July 4.

Silver Mines Expect Best Year Since '23

Favored by Increase in Production and High Mint Price.

Although the output of silver in the United States during May dropped to the lowest figure since last January, the production so far this year, aided by the 77.57 cents per fine ounce which the mints still pay for newly mined domestic metal, promises to make 1936 the biggest financial year for American producers since 1923, according to the Wall Street Journal.

In the first five months of this year, more silver was produced in the United States than for the full year of either 1932 or 1933 when world silver prices were at their record lows. Based on world prices value of this production was about $11,000,000, but actually it was worth $19,827,000 because of the high Government price. This value is higher than the value for the entire year's domestic output for any year from 1930 to 1933, inclusive.

According to the monthly report of the American Bureau of Metal Statistics, production in May amounted to 4,754,000 fine ounces for the United States, compared with 5,046,000 ounces in April and 2,693,000 for May, 1936.

Canada and Mexico.

Production in Canada has not kept pace with the increase in the United States. May output of 1,276,000 ounces, compared with 1,499,000 in April, and 1,896,000 in May 1935. Whereas production in the United States in the first five months increased to 24,550,000 fine ounces from 14,355,000 in the same period last year, Canadian output increased only to 7,278,000 from 6,299,000 ounces.

May figures for Mexico, the world's leading producer, are not yet available but April figures reveal a condition similar to that in Canada, a rate of increase slower than in the United States.

405 Liquidations Of Banks Completed

William Prentiss, jr., acting Comptroller of the Currency, announced yesterday the completion of the liquidation of 18 receiverships during June, making a total of 405 receiverships finally closed or restored to solvency since the so-called banking holiday of March, 1933.

Total disbursements, including offsets allowed, to depositors and other creditors of these 405 institutions, exclusive of the 42 receiverships restored to solvency, aggregated $112,064,736, or an average return of 74.36 per cent of total liabilities, while unsecured depositors received dividends amounting to an average of 58.94 per cent of their claims.

Stocks Lose More Ground in Moderate Trading; Wheat Breaks After Further Rise.

New York, July 7.—A turnover in grain prices, lower stock prices and firm prices for high-grade bonds marked a quiet day in Wall Street. Stock turnover was a little higher at around 1,000,000 shares. Prices closed a little above the worst. September wheat finished at 105¾ cents a bushel, a loss of ¾ of a cent.

While speculative interest in stocks continued at slack water, the tide ran high in grains. At the start wheat jumped about 4 cents a bushel in Chicago, and a little later it reached the day's trading limits in some other markets. Oats and barley also touched the limit. Then came a sudden reversal, with some of the less nimble speculators acting rather frightened.

In early afternoon reports of rains in Canada provided the excuse for heavy selling, which sent wheat at Chicago below the previous day's closing prices. Losses of more than 5 cents a bushel from the best prices of the day were taken. The grain futures markets proved one thing, namely, that in spite of Government control over activities, more action in short periods can be had for the speculator's money than usually can be found in stocks.

Farm Implement Shares Sold.

In stocks, the steels again were weak, but the heaviest losses in points were taken in the agricultural group. In that sector from 1 to 7 points were shot away. Rails also were weak, especially the farm country lines. Declines reached 1 to 3 points. Case led the decline in farm implements, Deere and Harvester were down 3 points. Great Northern, Santa Fe, Southern Pacific and Union Pacific gave up 1 to 3 points. Norfolk & Western, for no particular reason, dropped 5 points. The Alleghanies worked higher by 1 to 2 points.

Mail orders softened in sympathy with the farm list and rail equipments followed the railroad stocks. Chrysler and General Motors were the victims of profit-taking by those who felt the drought upset might cause the stock market to alter its course. Public utility shares were mixed, as were the oils. Standard hardened. Small losses were suffered by the foods, merchants and tobaccos.

On the surface the industrial waters were roughened by the fresh outbursts from labor leaders and laborite politicos intended to keep alive the effort to unionize the steel industry. It would seem to anyone reading the newspaper headlines that a fearful strike already was under way, with rioting, relief and casualties; and for that very reason many on the outside are beginning to wonder if the shouting is not a bit out of proportion to the action.

Higher Living Costs.

The best information that comes to Wall Street now is that most of the steel workers are apathetic toward unionization outside the industry. Wages are estimated at 7 per cent higher than the 1929 top, and there is said to be no discontent with the wage scale among the workers. Moreover, the industry is employing more skilled labor now than it ever has done, according to one first-rate authority. Under the circumstances it is not believed likely that either of two developments (both unfavorable from a stock market point of view) will take place, namely, another all-round increase in wages or a strike.

On another economic battlefront the news was more substantial in it unfavorableness. Hot, dry weather continues in the Northwest, threatening to reduce considerably the production of spring wheat, corn and perhaps live stock in four or five States. There is usually a tendency at this time of year to exaggerate drought reports, but in view of the three years of deliberate destruction of grain and meat supplies under the New Deal, with the co-operation of nature, the progress of another crop year along the same course is far from reassuring. When man and nature combine to limit crops, the consumer may be fairly certain that he is going to pay a lot more money for his food.

Expansion.

The point is made that while deposits, i. e., unused money in the banks, are up sharply, bank loans are down and that therefore only potential inflation is with us. During the past year the long downward swing in bank loans came to an end. If that item measures private debt, the private debt is now rising along with public debt, which means that soon the enormous burden of Federal and State deficits will do some real pinching. On the past year alone demand deposits at the member banks of the Federal Reserve system have risen more than one and three-quarter billions. Loans, mostly of the so-called commercial character, are up about $400,000,000.

Banking Position.

An interesting feature of the weekly condition figures of reporting member banks in 101 cities, as of July 1, is a gain of $88,000,000 in commercial loans, reflecting business borrowings to repay outstanding securities. Of the increase, $64,000,000 is in New York. Bank holdings of Government securities are $36,000,000 more, but holdings of Government guaranteed loans are down $13,000,000. All the drop in this item is in the New York area. Reserves are up $205,000,000, nearly half of the increase being in this district. Deposits of foreign banks are down $22,000,000 and time deposits $48,000,000, mainly at Chicago. Demand deposits are up $116,000,000. New York banks accounting for $34,000,000 of the increase.

Planned That Way.

Carryover of wheat, corn, oats and other foodstuffs, even after two or three years of dry weather, probably would be ample this year with another localized drought to prevent a sharp rise in food prices, had it not been for the Government's destructive farm policy. Farm products, it has almost seemed, have been regarded by the political authorities as evils in themselves, to be stamped out as far as possible. When paying the higher food prices this autumn and winter the consumer can reflect that "It didn't just happen; we planned it that way."

Prices.

Whatever may be the actual state of affairs in the West, the rise in grain and meat prices has gone far enough to give real concern. It may be fine for the farmer who has managed to produce something, but it is going to be finer for the foreign exporter of grain and far worse for the American consumer. Wheat prices are now about 30 per cent higher than a year ago. Corn and oats are about the same as a year ago, but they have had a big rise in the last two or three weeks. Butter now sells in the futures market at an advance of nearly 50 per cent over a year ago. Hogs are up nearly 20 per cent. Cattle prices are a little lower, but their turn is bound to come. Prices have a way of taking on something at every point, which means that the consumer will have to pay a good deal more than the rise which the farmer secures.

U. S. Income Up 15.2 Per Cent Over Year Ago

But Remains Below Peak for Recovery Reached Last October.

New York, July 7.—The national income produced in the United States rose in May for the third consecutive month, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute today. While it did not regain the peak of the recovery movement reached last October, it was 15.2 per cent higher than in May last year. The national income in May this year amounted to $4,847,000,000 as compared with $4,747,000,000 in April and with $4,207,000,000 in May, 1935. For the first five months, the national income amounted to $23,305,000,000 this year as against $20,651,000,000 last year, an increase of 12.9 per cent.

The price level in May was lower than in April or in May last year. The quantity of goods produced in May consequently showed a greater gain than the national income. General business was thus more active in May than in April or in May last year. The quantity of goods produced in May was 3.6 per cent larger than in April and 17.9 per cent larger than in May, 1935.

The quantity of goods produced during the first five months showed an increase of 12.6 per cent over the volume in the same period last year. This was somewhat less than the gain in the national income since prices averaged slightly higher during the first five months of 1936 than during the corresponding period of 1935. While 1936 represents the fourth year of expansion since the low for the depression, the quantity of goods produced during the first five months was still 16.1 per cent smaller than in the like period of the predepression year 1929.

This curtailment was due to the fact that prices during this period were too high in comparison with the national income. The output of manufactured goods in May was the same as in April, but it was 20.7 per cent larger than a year ago. Among the major industries, automobile production and cotton textile activity in May dropped below the rate in April, but steel mill activity increased. Building contracts on which manufacturing is considerably dependent, showed a moderate curtailment in May as compared with the April volume. All these industries, however, were decidedly more active in May than a year ago.

$50,000,000 Bills 3.58 Times Subscribed

Acting Secretary of the Treasury Taylor announces that the tenders for $50,000,000, or thereabouts, of 273-day Treasury bills, dated July 8, 1936, and maturing April 7, 1937, which were offered on July 3, have been opened at the Federal Reserve banks.

The total amount applied for was $179,143,000, of which $50,000,000 was accepted. The accepted bids range in price from 99.955, equivalent to a rate of about 0.059 per cent per annum, to 99.939, equivalent to a rate of about 0.060 per cent per annum, on a bank discount basis.

Commodities Climb In Deadly Drought

Chicago, July 7 (AP).—Grain prices have risen 10 to 18 cents a bushel, butter and eggs fractions to 4 cents a pound and hogs and cattle about 75 cents a hundredweight in the past three weeks during which the drought has been the major market factor. Comparison of the market prices of the major farm commodities today showed all values sharply higher than a year ago excepting only corn and cattle. Wheat prices, 10 cents higher than a week ago and 25 cents above a year ago, are double the quotation at this time in 1931. Since the first of June, wheat has gained 22 cents a bushel. Butter futures are quoted at the highest level since January, 1930, and are more than 9 cents higher than a year ago.

Dividends Resumed And Extras Voted

New York, July 7 (AP).—Announcements of extra and resumed dividends by several industrial companies figured on the favorable side of business news today.

Briggs Manufacturing Co., automobile body concern of Detroit, ordered an extra of 50 cents in addition to a regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents, both payable July 30 to stock or record July 16.

Ex-cell-o Aircraft & Tool Corporation, of Detroit, announced a 15 cent dividend on the common stock, the first since 1930, payable August 15 to stock of record August 1.

Hawaiian Pineapple Co., Ltd., ordered an extra of 25 cents and regular quarterly of 25 cents, payable July 31 to stock of record July 21.

National Liberty Insurance Co. declared an extra dividend of 10 cents and a regular semiannual of 10 cents, payable August 15 to stock of record August 1.

N. Y. State Borrows At Record Low Rate

New York, July 7 (AP).—Establishing a record in low interest costs for long or short term financing, New York City today awarded to the Chemical Bank & Trust Co. $5,000,000 of special corporate stock notes on a basis of 34-100ths of 1 per cent plus a premium of $18.

The next lowest bid was that of National City Bank at 32-100ths of 1 per cent and a premium of $105.

U. S. Treasury Receipts.

The position of the Treasury, July 3: Receipts, $22,866,537.78; expenditures, $24,806,384.31; net balance, $2,611,207,158.01; customs receipts for the month, $3,078,571.75.

Receipts for the fiscal year (since July 1), $36,441,179.19; expenditures, $74,744,913.20, despite repayments of emergency loans which have created a credit of $21,139,740.55 in recovery and relief expenditures; excess of expenditures, $38,303,734.01; gross debt, $33,656,868,264.98, a decrease of $41,666,542.75 under the previous day. Gold assets, $10,612,687,381.62.

Election Fails To Halt Rising Business Tide

Restored Confidence Is Held Chief Factor in Recovery.

New York, July 7.—Business activity continues to expand with "little regard for the traditional uncertainties of an election year," the magazine, Banking, says in its current issue.

Asserting that this recovery seems motivated by the restoration of confidence, Banking said that the quadrennial period of campaigning finds the country "assured that defeatism has itself been defeated and determined that the fruits of this major victory shall be held."

In discussing the banking situation, the publication states:

"How completely the banks have cleared away the wreckage of boom and depression years appears graphically in the fact that institutions in the Federal Deposit Insurance System had net additions to profits last year of $207,000,000 as compared with a net loss of $339,000,000 in 1934. However, this result was obtained more by stopping losses than by increasing gains and is more an evidence of completed liquidation than of increased earning power.

"Gross and net earnings on current account do not make much of a showing. Total earnings from current operations between 1934 and 1935 fell from $1,515,000,000 to $1,485,000,000. Current expenses also were reduced from $1,067,000,000 to $1,042,000,000—good, but not good enough to cover the loss in earnings."

Mary E. Rafter, Social Worker, Dies in Maine

Was Noted for Efforts to Build Up Playground System Here.

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Rafter, 67, one of Washington's most prominent social workers, died late Monday night at her summer home at Bryant Pond, Me. A heart attack was the cause of death, according to word received here yesterday by relatives.

Mrs. Rafter was best known for her long years of service in behalf of Washington's playgrounds and of the Parent-Teacher movement.

Always interested in improving recreational facilities for boys and girls, Mrs. Rafter pioneered in the District playground movement. She was an ardent worker when local playgrounds were still a private enterprise, and was one of those instrumental in having the playgrounds expanded and taken over as a public system.

Organized Girl Scouts.

She was no less devoted to the Parent-Teacher organization. She was president of the D. C. Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations for 10 years, and worked in behalf of the movement since 1910.

She organized the Girl Scouts of Washington. In another project she interested the children of Washington's slum sections in cleaning up back yards and in beautifying these yards with flower gardens. As a result of her efforts more than 500 yards were so transformed.

For 15 years she was branch secretary of the Girls' Society of St. Mark's Episcopal Church. Mrs. Rafter was a member of the Arts Club, Sunshine Club, Political Study Club, and Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Native of Maryland.

Mrs. Rafter was born September 3, 1868, near Potomac, Md. Interested in social studies at an early age, she took social service courses at George Washington University. Later she studied at the New York School of Social Service.

She married Giles Scott Rafter in 1887. Mr. Rafter, an employe of the Patent Office for 50 years, died here last December. The Rafter residence was at 2434 Thirty-ninth street northwest.

Mrs. Rafter left Washington for her Maine home June 15. A sister, Mrs. William S. Newell, of Washington, and Mr. Newell, who also have a home at Bryant Pond, were with Mrs. Rafter at the time of her death.

Other survivors are a son, Case Broderick Rafter, of Washington, and two grandchildren, Case Broderick, jr., and John Grant Rafter.

The body will be brought to Washington today, and will be at the Lee Funeral Home, Fourth street and Massachusetts avenue northeast, until funeral services at 3:30 p. m. tomorrow. The Rev. Charles T. Warner, rector of St. Alban's Parish, of which Mrs. Rafter was a member, will officiate. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Rep. Duffey, 50, Dead in Toledo Of Long Illness

New Deal Supporter Was House Member for 2 Sessions.

Warren J. Duffey, 50, ruddy-faced Representative from the Ninth Ohio District in the last two sessions of Congress, died yesterday at his Toledo home, the Associated Press reported.

Duffey had been ill for some time. A graduate of St. John's University in his native Toledo, and of the University of Michigan Law School, he had been identified with the Democratic Party in Ohio for the past quarter of a century.

On graduating from law school in 1911, Duffey entered the private practice of law in Toledo and delved into politics on the side. Two years later, he was elected to the Ohio Legislature, serving from 1913-14.

In 1917, under the auspices of the Democratic machine, he ran for the Toledo City Council. He was elected and served for two years.

He did not run for office again until 1932, when he was elected to the Seventy-third Congress. After being re-elected for another term, Duffey was defeated for renomination in primaries last May. Duffey supported the New Deal.

His part in the last two sessions was a quiet one, confined mostly to duty on the House Judiciary Committee.

Former Soviet Foreign Chief Dies in Moscow

By the United Press.

Moscow (Wednesday), July 8.—George Tchicherin, 64, former foreign minister, died today.

George Vassilievich Tchicherin, for 12 years the Soviet Union's foreign minister, was acknowledged even by his enemies as one of the most brilliant diplomats of his time. He retired from the post in 1930 solely because of ill health.

His successor, Maxim Litvinoff, as his assistant actually handled the work of the ministry the last two years of Tchicherin's incumbency.

Was in English Prison.

The Bolshevik revolution of November, 1917, found Tchicherin in an English prison as a result of antiwar activities. In 1918 he was released and exchanged for the English ambassador, Sir George Buchanan, kept as a hostage by the Russians.

Upon his arrival in Russia, Tchicherin took over the portfolio of foreign affairs from Leon Trotsky. In the next decade he scored triumph after triumph in diplomacy, and the Soviet government was recognized by one after another of the European and Asiatic powers.

He was born of aristocratic, well-to-do parents and his father was in the Tsar's diplomatic service. His mother's family also numbered several Russian diplomats.

Family Became Poor.

Later Tchicherin's family became relatively poor. The fact that his family was thus unable to live up to its high social position created resentment against society in Tchicherin. Years later this resentment turned him into one of the bitterest enemies of the Tsarist regime and a leader of the revolutionary movement.

He was an extraordinary linguist and was noted for personal idiosyncrasies. He loved to work at night and he forced practically the entire foreign office to keep a schedule which turned night into day. He thought nothing of inviting an ambassador for a chat at 3 or 4 a. m. This was a favorite hour also for issuance of important announcements to the press.

James Sneed Dies At Local Hospital

James Sneed, 37, of 1521 New Hampshire avenue northwest, died yesterday at Emergency Hospital, where he had been undergoing treatment.

Quadruplets Cast Their First Ballot

By the Associated Press.

Durant, Okla., July 7.—Uncertain just how to go about it, the famous Keys sisters became America's first voting quadruplets today.

Dressed identically in navy blue sports dresses, the sisters—Mary, Roberta, Mona and Leota—stepped into the huge drill room of Durant's armory to cast their ballots in Oklahoma's primary.

"It's a big thrill and lots of fun to vote," they chorused. "We were together on the Senate race."

Philippine Isles HomeRulePlan Called Success

Natives Take New Interest in Government, Murphy Tells D. C. Banquet.

Frank Murphy, United States High Commissioner to the Philippine Islands, said last night that self-government in the islands had so far been a definite success and that since the start of the Commonwealth Filipinos had taken a new interest in government.

The commissioner was speaking at a dinner at the Shoreham Hotel given in his honor by Quentin Paredes, the Philippine resident commissioner here, and Filipino residents of Washington.

Murphy said he hoped that future United States policy toward the islands would be made with the thought of the United States trusteeship and would be based on sympathetic interest.

He added the hope that so long as the Filipinos remain under the United States flag that there would be no distinction made between them and other peoples under United States protection.

In proposing a toast to Commissioner Murphy, Paredes termed him the man "whose diplomacy is greatly responsible for the harmonious relations between the United States and the Philippine Commonwealth." Paredes expressed the hope that Murphy's "interest for the welfare of 14,000,000 friends" might induce him to continue in the Philippines.

Among those present at the dinner were the Secretary of War and Mrs. George H. Dern, Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre, Dr. Stanley K. Hornbeck, Chief of the Division of Far Eastern Affairs; Dr. Ernest H. Gruening, director of the Division of Territories and Island Possessions; Brig. Gen. Creed F. Cox, Chief of the War Department Bureau of Insular Affairs, and former Senator and Mrs. Hawes.

Beer Drivers Strike While Joliet Swelters

Joliet, Ill., July 7 (AP).—Joliet's beer drinkers, sweltering in temperatures of more than 100 degrees, had to depend on the outside beer supply today as drivers at the city's three breweries struck.

Pickets surrounded the Acme, Citizens and Pioneer plants as the drivers attempted to organize a teamsters' union. No violence was reported. It was expected that the hot weather demands would be supplied by incoming trucks.

U. S. May Make Investigation Of AutoDispute

Machinists' Head Predicts Early Settlement of Capital Strike.

A Federal investigation of recent alleged efforts to obtain out-of-town labor for local automobile repair concerns effected by the current mechanics' strike appeared probable last night after a meeting of the Central Labor Union.

Following a report by David Kaplan, of the International Association of Machinists, the labor body was asked to seek a Department of Justice investigation of out-of-town newspaper advertisements, reputedly seeking mechanics who are willing to work in Washington shops.

At the same time, Kaplan predicted early settlement of the dispute and said he did not believe it would be necessary to "pull" additional shops in order to win the strike. The investigation request was based on recent legislation signed by President Roosevelt prohibiting interstate transportation of men for purposes of interfering with "peaceful picketing."

Meanwhile, a 30-day suspended sentence was given Grady Wilson, striking mechanic accused of assault, by Judge Edward M. Curran in Police Court. Wilson, a picket, was charged with assaulting Walter Jones, Hill & Tibbetts employe, during a dispute at the garage.

According to testimony, Wilson was one of three persons who accosted Jones several nights ago and engaged him in argument. While they talked, Jones was struck on the head. Judge Curran suspended sentence and placed Wilson on probation for 90 days.

Fugitive Still at Large.

Hancock, Md., July 7.—Clyde Bishop, who escaped early Sunday from the jail here, is still at large as police hunt for an accomplice who, they are certain, broke the outside lock and released Bishop, being held in the lockup on a minor charge. A charge of breaking jail will be made against Bishop, said County Investigator Clarence Baker.
